Hull Cites 9-Power Pact In Attack on China Split; Duce Cool to Peace Plan

World Warned That U.S. Frowns on Move for Autonomy.

All Nations Urged To Respect Treaty

Statement Is Issued as British Give Sharp Notice to Japan.

Text of Secretary Hull's statement—Page 10.

By the Associated Press.

Japan and the rest of the world were put on notice last night by Secretary Hull, that the United States Government does not look with equanimity upon the autonomy movement in North China.

In a formal statement, which followed close upon a sharper and even more pointed warning to Japan in the British House of Commons, the Secretary of State called upon "all nations" to respect existing treaties. Hull did not mention the name of Japan, which generally has been credited with encouraging the move to separate the North China provinces from the Nanking government, but his meaning was clear.

His equally obvious reference also was to the nine-power treaty. With Japan, Great Britain and the United States among its signatories, this pact guarantees both China's territorial and administrative integrity and the maintenance of the "open door" to foreign trade.

Joint Action in Doubt.

Wide speculation accompanied Hull's statement. It came almost on top of the assertion by Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign secretary, that anything lending color to the belief that Japan's influence was behind the autonomy move, "can only do harm to the prestige of Japan."

This perhaps coincidental concert of statements immediately recalled that Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, has discussed the Sino-Japanese crisis with Hull recently. Rumors that there might be some joint action in the Far East, however, have gone unconfirmed.

Curiously, this first public expression by Hull of American policy toward recent Sino-Japanese developments followed a House of Commons complaint against the United States. Sir Austen Chamberlain, a member of the British World War cabinet, asserted this government was difficult "to get on with," and tended to abstain from close "arrangement with any other power" in "any distant adventure" where "extreme measures are taken."

Hull Cites U. S. Interests.

Hull's statement, labelled as in response to inquiries by newspapermen, cited the extensive American interests in north China, as well as this Government's treaty obligations.

"The American Government," he said, "is therefore, closely observing what is happening there."

At the outset, the Secretary of State's carefully worded statement said:

"Whatever the origin, whoever the agents, the fact stands out that an effort is being made * * * and is being resisted * * * to bring about a substantial change in the political status and condition of several of China's northern provinces."

He described this as a "political struggle which is unusual in character and which may have far-reaching effects," and added:

"Unusual developments in any part of China are rightly and necessarily of concern not alone to the government and people of China, but to all of the many people and powers who have interests in China.

"For, in relations with China and in China, the treaty rights and the treaty obligations of the 'treaty powers' are in general identical.

"In the area under reference the interests of the United States are similar to those of other powers. In that area there are located, and our rights and obligations appertain to, a considerable number of Amer-

Briton Declares U. S. 'Hard to Get On With'

London, Dec. 5 (A).—The United States Government is "a very difficult Government to get on with," Sir Austen Chamberlain, a member of the British World War cabinet, today told the House of Commons during a discussion of American moves in the Italo-Ethiopian situation.

He said the whole trend of the American policy is to "abstain from any close arrangement with any other power." For this reason, he said, Great Britain cannot expect the United States to be a partner "in any distant adventure," where "extreme measures are taken."

England Urges Peace Accord In Open Appeal

Hoare Calls on Il Duce to Accept Land; Battleships Quit Gibraltar.

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 5.—Great Britain's foreign secretary, Sir Samuel Hoare, addressed a new and open peace appeal to Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy today as six British men o' war, bound for Atlantic maneuvers, got steam up to clear the warship-dotted water of the Mediterranean Sea.

Before a hushed House of Commons, Sir Samuel joined this plea, a promise of "another great effort" to end the Italo-Ethiopian war, and a pledge to "play our part" in any collective League of Nations action to apply an oil embargo on the Italian kingdom.

Tonight these highlights emerged from a crowded day of significant pronouncements and disclosures here:

The battle cruisers Hood and Renown and four destroyers, which steamed to Gibraltar at the height of Italo-British tension, will leave this week for "normal" maneuvers in the Atlantic, not far from the great rock. Others will go when they return, but authoritative sources said the maneuvers had no political significance and did not mean actual withdrawal of the warships from the Mediterranean.

Sir Samuel, declaring both Britain and the League to be pledged in principle to the oil embargo, said the United Kingdom "shall be prepared to take our share in whatever collective action is determined" at the League sanctions committee meeting December 12.

He told the House of Commons "the French and we" intend to "redouble our efforts" to reconcile Italy, Ethiopia and the League before that date, and appealed directly to Il Duce and his countrymen to "dismiss entirely from their minds the suspicion that we have sinister motives behind our support of the League."

Taking cognizance of the North China autonomy trouble, the foreign secretary politely warned Japan that her relations with other powers may suffer unless her position is clarified quickly.

The significance of coming Anglo-French conversations, in Paris this week-end, was magnified by declarations that Britain is doing its utmost to restore peace before oil sanctions are effective, and by an announcement that Sir Robert Vansittart, permanent undersecretary of state for foreign affairs, will accompany Sir Samuel to talk with Premier Pierre Laval.

Italians Believed Holding Out for Important Ethiopian Cities.

They Want Aduwa, Scene of Massacre

Mussolini Is Reported in Mood to Study a Compromise.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Rome, Dec. 5.—Premier Benito Mussolini is preparing to turn thumbs down on the Franco-British proposals for settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian war, diplomats believed tonight.

This was understood to be the reason why the foreign office spokesman announced "Italy sees no foundation for recent optimism abroad regarding possibility of an Italo-Ethiopian settlement."

The broad outline of terms drafted at Paris by Maurice Peterson and Count Rene Doynel Saint-Quentin, French and British foreign office African experts, was submitted to Il Duce by Vittorio Gerutti, ambassador to France.

Duce Declared Dissatisfied.

Mussolini reportedly found the proposals unsatisfactory, failing to meet Italy's minimum requirements for territorial expansion.

This is the peace plan France and Britain offer Italy before they go to Geneva to vote for extension of sanctions to oil, coal and metals needed for Italy's military machine:

1. Italy to give Ethiopia a corridor to the sea between Assab, Eritrea and French Somaliland.

2. Ethiopia to give Italy a strip of northern Tigre Province, not including the Ethiopian holy city, Aksum, and possibly not Aduwa. Both cities are well inside the present Italian line.

3. Ethiopia to cede to Italian Somaliland in the south most of Ogaden and Bale. The north boundary would be a few miles below Sassa Baneh and the east less than 100 miles from Addis Ababa. The French propose also to give Italy a strip of southern Ethiopia extending southward from about 70 miles below Addis Ababa to British Kenya.

Italian Demands Listed.

These points fall far short of all previous understandings of Il Duce's minimum conditions of peace. Italy is believed holding out for:

1. A strip of northern Ethiopia drawn above a line extending between the Setit River westward to Eritrea. This includes Aksum, Adigrat and Aduwa. Retention of Aduwa is important to the Italians for historical reasons, as it avenges the slaughter of their army there 39 years ago.

2. All of the eastern Ethiopian low country, connecting Eritrea and Italian Somaliland.

3. Substantial commercial and other concessions in the Amharic highlands, with assurance that Ethiopian raids upon Italian territory shall cease.

Mussolini is reported in a compromising frame of mind, however. Well-informed diplomats do not expect him to reject the Franco-British plan brutally, closing the door permanently on peace. They believe he will encourage a more generous offer.

Sanctions Discounted.

Il Duce apparently no longer fears extension of sanctions. His demeanor is interpreted in some quarters as indication that he has become convinced the League's penalties will be ineffective to halt the war.

The one thing that worries Mussolini, it is believed, is the slowness of Italian military progress against Ethiopia. The recent transfer of Marshal Pietro Badoglio to East Africa may ease that worry.

If Mussolini does reject the new peace plan, prompt application of Reported Plot to Bomb Bremen Results in Heavy Guard at N. Y.

By the United Press.

New York, Dec. 5.—The North German Lloyd luxury liner Bremen, center of one international controversy, was given a large Coast Guard and police escort tonight when she arrived in Quarantine as result of an alleged Communist plot to bomb the vessel.

The Coast Guard cutters Calumet and Icarus, Coast Guard patrol boats 157 and 172 and police launch No. 3 were rushed to Quarantine to stick close to the huge ship throughout the night and warn off any suspicious boats which came too close.

The Bremen arrived at Quarantine and dropped anchor for the night at 10:15 o'clock after being escorted from Ambrose Lightship by the Icarus.

Capt. W. Drechsel, marine superintendent of the North German Lloyd line, notified police and Federal authorities that a friend had reported to him overhearing discussion of the alleged plot at a Communist meeting. The Bremen was the scene of a Communist anti-Nazi riot last July.

The Bremen will start for her berth at North River Pier 86 at 5 a. m. tomorrow.

Besides the usual guards at the pier, the police department will have as an extra detail 3 sergeants, 40 policemen and 5 mounted officers. These were to begin duty at the pier at midnight.

Authorities were guarding against any possibility of another "international incident" such as that last July 27 when anti-Hitler "Red" demonstrators tore the Nazi swastika from the Bremen's mast and threw it into the river. The incident drew protests from the German government.

Socialite Engaged to Wed Senator

Bachrach.

Mrs. Eleanor Davies Cheeseborough, New York and Washington socialite, who will wed Maryland's bachelor Senator.

Senator Tydings Will Marry Mrs. Cheeseborough, Divorcee

Mother of Washington Beauty Announces Wedding Will Take Place Soon After New Year; Her Father Will Wed Mrs. E. F. Hutton.

Mrs. Eleanor Davies Cheeseborough soon will become the bride of Senator Millard Tydings, the Senate's "most eligible" bachelor. Announcement of the engagement was made formally late yesterday by Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies, mother of Mrs. Cheeseborough.

Mrs. Davies said no definite date had been set for the wedding of her eldest daughter and the Senator from Maryland, but that it probably would be solemnized shortly after New Year's Day, adding that the nuptials would be very quiet.

Meanwhile, Washington friends received definite word that the often rumored and many times denied marriage of Mrs. Cheeseborough's father, Joseph E. Davies, former chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, and Mrs. Marjorie Post Hutton, would take place in Mrs. Hutton's New York apartment this month, probably December 16.

Davies, an internationally known corporation lawyer, when reached in his apartment at the Shoreham Hotel last night, said he was unable at this time "either to confirm or deny" his impending marriage. Friends of Mrs. Hutton here declared, however, that arrangements for the wedding were virtually complete and that an announcement from Mrs. Hutton might be expected shortly.

Several months ago Mrs. Cheeseborough returned from Reno, where she was granted a divorce from Thomas Patten Cheeseborough, jr. Since then she has been living with her two small children, Jo and Alice, in the Davies home on Massachusetts avenue.

Ever since Mrs. Cheeseborough returned from the Nevada divorce capital, the rumor that she would wed Senator Tydings has been persistent.

Bruno to Make Own Last Plea In Death House

Pardon Board to Visit Cell for Hearing If U. S. Rejects Case.

By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 5.—If the United States Supreme Court rules against him, Bruno Richard Hauptmann will be allowed to make one last fight for his life by standing face to face in the death house with the only men who can save him and try to convince them he is innocent of the murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, jr.

There will be eight of these men—members of the New Jersey Court of Pardons, who hold life or death power over Hauptmann. No court can overrule them, and it is within their power to free Hauptmann, a jury verdict and appellate opinions to the contrary.

These facts became known tonight when Gov. Harold G. Hoffman revealed that, as a member of the court of pardons, he already had made a secret trip to the death house of Trenton State Prison and talked for an hour with Hauptmann about the crime that shocked civilization. He also has asked the seven other members of the pardons court to go there and hear Hauptmann plead his own case.

Detective in Case.

Into the case today stepped a bald-headed man, who has the reputation of being one of the ablest detectives on the East Coast. He is Ellis Parker, of Burlington County, who has attained enough prominence to have a book written about his exploits in the pursuit and capture of criminals.

Hoffman said Parker was conducting an "independent investigation" of the Lindbergh crime.

"But I have not authorized a private investigation of any kind," Hoffman said. "Mr. Parker is an old friend and has visited me several times. My only interest is, as a member of the Court of Pardons, to see that justice is done. Being a member of the court I cannot express an opinion of any kind."

Hoffman conceded that to have the Court of Pardons visit a prisoner would be unusual, but said

Defense Denied Tax Conspiracy Mistrial Move

Testimony 'Prejudicial' to Clients, Leahy Says, but Is Overruled.

Denial of a defense action for a mistrial yesterday marked the District Supreme Court income tax conspiracy trial of a lawyer and two Internal Revenue Bureau employes.

William E. Leahy sought to have the jury dismissed because of testimony he characterized as "prejudicial" to his clients, Frank B. McElhill, New York tax consultant; John W. Hardgrove, former Internal Revenue Bureau chief conferee, and Henning R. Nelson, former bureau auditor.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts rejected the motion with the comment that the jury should "hear both sides of the question."

Quotes Hardgrove.

Leahy had opposed permission for John R. Cox, a bureau intelligence unit agent, to relate statements made to him by Hardgrove.

Cox explained he entered the case after Thomas N. McCarter, Newark public utilities magnate, informed Secretary Morgenthau McElhill offered to settle a $149,000 income tax assessment against McCarter for a $10,000 fee.

In August, 1934, Cox explained, he told Hardgrove:

"In view of what we know about the McCarter case, you ought to help us clear up a number of cases that have been fixed here over a period of ten years. Otherwise we will have to pull a lot of cases out of the files and reaudit them."

Cox added Hardgrove responded: "Why should I help you? You're going to burn me up anyway."

Leahy, in apparent efforts to prove Federal agents obtained information from Hardgrove by duress, asked Cox whether an investigator ate lunch with Hardgrove while he was being questioned.

An agent did have lunch with Hardgrove, Cox said, but Hardgrove was "not under arrest" and was not told anything he said would be used against him.

Another witness, John A. Conklin, a bureau employe, told of talks he had in New York with McElhill.

Conklin reported McElhill, in ex-

Business Pledges Battle On Interference by U.S.; George Hints Sales Tax

Senator Calls It 'Near' if Court Upsets AAA Processing Levy.

Georgian Confers At Warm Springs

President Formerly Held Such a Levy Would 'Horrify' Him.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.,
A Staff Correspondent.

Warm Springs, Ga., Dec. 5.—In the event the Supreme Court holds the AAA processing taxes invalid, the Roosevelt Administration may turn to a general manufacturers sales tax as a substitute, Senator Walter F. George (Democrat), of Georgia, indicated here today after a visit of more than an hour with President Roosevelt.

The Georgia Senator asserted that should an unfavorable AAA decision come from the Supreme Court, scheduled to hear arguments on the validity of this New Deal measure next Monday, "you will find us very close to a manufacturers sales tax."

George projected the suggestion as his own, asserting it was not a reflection of the President's mind. The fact that Senator George should throw out this suggestion as he came down from the "Little White House" on Pine Mountain, however, was regarded as significant for several reasons.

May Be Trial Balloon.

One possibility was that the Georgian was sending up a trial balloon for the Administration to gauge public opinion on the question of a sales tax, which in the past has been anathema to President Roosevelt. He scotched proposals for a general sales tax congress three years ago when he was President-elect by asserting he was "horrified" at the contemplation of such a step.

Since then, of course, Mr. Roosevelt concurred in the imposition of processing taxes, which are nothing but sales taxes on such necessities of life as food and clothing. But until the present he and his Administration have shied away from any levy labeled a "sales tax."

Whether Mr. Roosevelt has changed his mind is not known, but it is no secret that the Administration has been gravely concerned over a substitute for the processing taxes should they go down by Supreme Court decree. The problem cannot be solved by abandoning AAA, as was done with NRA, even if the Administration wishes to do so—and it does not.

Must Find New Taxes.

The problem confronting the President is that the Government is committed in acreage reduction contracts to the payment of hundreds of millions of dollars. Already there is a gaping hole in Treasury revenue, due to the failure of processors to pay the taxes pending judicial determination of the validity of the law. These payments could be taken out of the general funds of the Treasury, but if they are there will be no hope of reducing the Federal deficit in the next year or so.

When the Administration looks around for other sources of revenue only the imposition of some kind of a sales tax—aside from increasing the income tax rates—appears feasible. Thus Senator George's remarks here may be a straw in the wind. In addition, he is an influential member of the Senate Finance Committee and the proposal indicates the attitude of one who will play a large part in selecting a substitute for the processing taxes.

Senator George went to the "Little White House" with his colleague, Senator Richard B. Russell; Erle

10 Billions in Gold Driven to U. S. by War

By the Associated Press.

More than $10,000,000,000 in gold now is cached on American shores. The flow of the metal from war-frightened Europe during the week ended December 4 totaled $135,000,000, including a single shipment of $80,000,000.

The Federal Reserve Board, in its weekly statement of condition of the regional banks, said yesterday the supply was $10,009,000,000, the biggest ever accummulated here.

The United States' hoard is now well above 40 per cent of the world's supply, estimated to be $23,000,000,000.

Bankhead Sick, Junta to Guide House Forecast

Taylor Reported Retiring, Fight for Leadership Held Possible.

By Robert C. Albright.

Control of the House of Representatives this session will pass under direction of a hydra-headed leadership of picked members, acting under orders from Speaker Joseph W. Byrns and Representative William B. Bankhead, it was said last night in an important House quarter.

The new plan of action was hastily considered following definite word that House Majority Leader Bankhead, absent all last session because of a serious illness, plans to return to Congress in January to take over—at least nominally—his leadership duties.

Reports that Representative Edward T. Taylor, of Colorado, planned to retire as acting leader had been current through the Capitol for some weeks. It is known that members of his family and personal friends have importuned him to relinquish the arduous leadership role because of his health.

May Include O'Connor.

Government of the House by a junta of selected leaders, each of whom would be assigned special tasks and work together co-operatively, has been guardedly talked over and agreed to by Taylor and others, it was said in an authoritative quarter. Speaker Byrns, now returning from the Orient, of course, will have a dominant say in the matter when he returns.

Those tentatively mentioned as likely to comprise the leadership group were Representative John J. O'Connor, of New York, chairman of the House Rules Committee; Representative Thomas H. Cullen, of New York, former assistant leader; Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Virginia, and possibly Representative Lindsay C. Warren, of North Carolina.

Representative Patrick J. Boland, of Pennsylvania, who did an effective job last session as Democratic whip, would be a pivotal member.

Scramble in Sight.

Others, such as Representative Fred M. Vinson, of Kentucky, might also be included in the group. It was said that Representative Sam Reyburn, of Texas, twice a Speakership candidate, has no present desire to appear in the leadership picture.

Representative O'Connor, himself twice a candidate for Speaker, would retain his chairmanship of the Rules Committee, and at the same time do important floor duty both in shoving forward Adminis-

Jimmy, 7, Adds Bit to Toy Fund In Memory of Dead Laddie Boy

Jimmy Foushee, 7, of 3309 Cleveland avenue, yesterday made his contribution to The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund in memory of his dog, Laddie Boy, killed last summer by an automobile.

Since The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund was started, some years ago, many have made contributions in memory of their pets.

Jimmie Foushee's contribution of a quarter matched similar gifts made Wednesday by Marsh and Kimball Clark, twin 6-year-old sons of Senator and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark.

"I am glad to help again," said Jimmie. "Gee, but it must be awful not to get any toys at Christmas. I know Santa Claus is hard up this year and every little bit helps."

Persons having new or used toys which they wish to give the fund may send them to the fund headquarters by calling a Terminal Taxicab, Decatur 5130.

Officials and drivers of these taxicabs are co-operating again with The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund in contributing this transportation to the task of seeing no needy child is without a toy on Christmas morning.

The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund is co-operating with the Christmas committee of the Council of Social Agencies, which coordinates the work of various toy funds to see there is no duplication of effort or distribution.

Many of the toys given to The Post will be sent the Central Toy Shop maintained by the Council of Social Agencies at 417 G street northwest, where busy workers are sorting, arranging and repairing toys.

Industrial Conference Denounces Trend to Dictatorship.

New Crash Seen In Inflation Steps

Trade Pact, Wage Rules, Taxes, Social Security Are Denounced.

By Felix Bruner.
A Staff Correspondent.

New York, Dec. 5.—The Congress of American Industry, representing the Nation's industrial leadership, adopted a declaration of independence from Government interference today and pledged itself to continuous opposition to nearly every New Deal measure and proposal affecting business.

Meeting in conjunction with the annual convention of the National Association of Manufacturers, the congress adopted a platform and resolutions carrying its battle against the Roosevelt Administration far beyond any previous business attack.

The platform itself contained four principal demands:

That constitutional guarantees be maintained.

That freedom of enterprise be preserved.

That sound tax and financial policies be maintained.

That social security be established through economic progress rather than through attempts by the Government to assure individual security.

U. S. System Detailed.

The platform set forth in detail what the convention termed the "American system," and demanded this system be maintained. The American system, it explained, represents voluntary and individual enterprise.

In addition to the platform, the Industrial congress held:

That "as between the present anti-trust laws and new legislation of the type of the national industrial recovery act, we unhesitatingly choose the anti-trust laws."

That "we join in the demand made by every enlightened economic organization for abandonment of the philosophy that prosperity can be produced through curtailing production, whether in agriculture or in industry. The truly abundant life can be supported only by abundant production of things that enrich the lives of all."

That "it is a matter of common observation that our governmental powers, decisions and policies are being largely dictated by persons who have not been elected to official position and who are not responsible to the people for their acts, decisions and policies."

Outside Government.

That social security legislation is outside the proper functions of government and that for this reason the act should be repealed.

That industry pledges its support to a constructive agricultural program and "will welcome the support of agriculture in opposing wasteful Government expenditures, Government competition with industry, unnecessary governmental restrictions and burdens which hamper national recovery, and in curbing the present trend toward dangerous credit expansion."

The convention held reciprocal trade agreements engender "an element of uncertainty and fear" in the business situation. At the same time it pointed out that business is faced with "fierce foreign competition."

"We are working," a resolution said, "under the constant threat of new disruptions which are the result of a policy tending toward the ruinous doctrine of free trade."

Hits Trade Power.

The resolution insisted the President should not be authorized to conclude trade agreements without the consent of the Senate and called for a clearly defined and efficient anti-dumping law.

Next to the platform itself, per-

Roosevelt's Son Was Lobby Aid, Says Mitchell

Ex-Air Chief Hurls Charge at Patent Hearing; Hits Aviation Interests.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 5.—Brig. Gen. William Mitchell charged today that Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, once worked for a "powerful lobby" which the wartime head of the A. E. F. Air Service said practically dictates the Nation's aviation policy.

Testifying before the congressional Committee on Patents, Mitchell said:

"They go right into the heart of Washington. They actually moved the headquarters of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce to the Capital City.

"The son of the President, Elliott, was there working for them. But when he was found out, he beat a hasty retreat."

Army Planes Unfit.

Mitchell told the committee, which is conducting hearing into the cross-licensing and pooling of patents, that patent pools had retarded American aviation and were "inimical to the public interest."

Suggesting the Government manufacture its own aircraft for military use, Mitchell said airplanes now in service are little better than the "flaming coffins" he commanded during the war.

"Today the United States military service has not one single plane in service which is suitable to engaging in war against a first-class power."

Reference to the lobby precipitated a squabble among committee members. Representative Fred A. Hartley, of New Jersey, challenged him.

"Do you mean to say that lobbyists can come in and dictate to the heads of the air force of our Army?" he asked.

"I certainly do mean just that," Gen. Mitchell replied.

Commercial Lines Hit.

Representative Matthew A. Dunn, of the committee, charged that "they come down there every day trying to lobby for something."

Immediately Chairman William I. Sirovich, of New York, and Representative J. B. Daly, of Pennsylvania, demanded that the record show they had never been troubled by lobbyists.

Continuing his testimony, Mitchell said the patent pool "almost dictates" that one of its members should get contracts for Government aircraft construction.

Mitchell also hit commercial aviation in the United States, stating it was not up to the standards of other nations. He said transport ships were unsafe.

"Anyone who goes up in one is taking his life in his hands," he added.

Horace Keane, New York airplane manufacturer, testified there was "collusion and dominating influences" in awarding of contracts by the Army air service.

"Pure Libel," Elliott Says.

Fort Worth, Tex., Dec. 5 (AP).—Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, branded "pure libel" tonight charges of Brig. Gen. William Mitchell that young Roosevelt once worked for a "powerful lobby."

"In the first place I have never participated in any lobbying activities," young Roosevelt said. "I have never contacted any member of Congress or any executive officers in the administrative branch or any Army or Navy official in any capacity to influence him or them in decisions concerning military or commercial aviation. The statment of former Gen. Mitchell is pure libel of the most vicious type and undoubtedly intended to attract unsavory publicity to my efforts to earn a living honestly."

Between You and Me

Business Bitterness Makes G. O. P. Its Ally; Roosevelt 'Breathing Spell' Useless.

By Raymond Clapper

THERE can scarcely be any doubt now that business will use the Republican Party in 1936 as its vehicle to smash the New Deal. Currents more powerful than any individual seem likely to sweep the party into that role.

President Roosevelt must by now have abandoned any hope he may have had that his recent "breathing spell" would mollify the business world. He could scarcely have expected to win its enthusiastic support. Undoubtedly he hoped to divide the ranks of businessmen and sooth a proportion of them into tacit acquiescence.

But each day brings fresh evidence of the bitterness against Roosevelt which is uniting business into a crusade against his re-election. Business is going into this fight with fervor. It has not been so united and in such an angry mood since the campaign against Bryan in 1896.

One of the most significant forecasts of this bitter fight is found in the convention of the National Manufacturers Association at New York. Its president declared that industry has been forced in self-defense "to enter the political arena or be destroyed as a private enterprise." One speaker after another spoke of the impending "combat," the necessity of business fighting for its life, of "fantastic policies" and "revolutionary theories." Hundreds of the leading business men of the country were present to spur the speakers on with thundering applause.

It was, in effect, a declaration of war against the re-election of Roosevelt. Stockholders and employes are to be "educated." Organized business is determined to "liquidate" the New Deal.

This is not the isolated action of one group of business men. The same sentiment is reflected in the ranks of the United States Chamber of Commerce and the American Liberty League. It is to be a fight with no quarter asked or given. Sentiment is so overwhelming in the business world that only an exceptionally sturdy individual can stand up against his associates and be for Roosevelt. It has become a matter of group loyalty. Few wish to appear traitors to their own kind. The surest route to unpopularity in the business world will be to support Roosevelt. The votes he gets from that class will be silent votes, indeed.

Up to now there has been no declaration of support for the Republican party. But that support becomes inevitable. How else can this deeply indignant anti-Roosevelt feeling find political expression? It cannot hope to defeat him for renomination. It would be wasting time to think of setting up an independent party. Obviously its whole chance of overthrowing Roosevelt lies in taking over the Republican party and going to town.

Such an alliance will never be openly avowed perhaps. But the foundations for it already are laid. The new finance committee of the Republican National Committee is composed almost exclusively of big-shot business men out of these anti-Roosevelt groups. They are the men who will raise the Republican war chest.

As the situation is developing now, it becomes more and more unlikely that any campaign to "liberalize" the Republican Party will succeed. Senator Borah has undertaken to overthrow the Eastern conservative leadership of the party. But it is taking on the aspect of a forlorn cause. He may put on a spectacular show at the next convention. He may force some weasel words into the platform. The candidate may be a man like Gov. Landon of Kansas, who has progressive instincts and has been quite friendly to most of the objectives and some of the activities of the New Deal. Or it may be Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, who in the Senate voted for many New Deal measures. They are the only two liberally inclined prospects who have a reasonable chance at the nomination.

But the real issue is more powerful than any one man. The Presidential fight is shaping up on a class division.

For years many persons, while deploring class conflict, have advocated that the two great parties should divide on progressive and conservative lines. The two parties have for the most part avoided that in the past. Each has tried to straddle class lines.

Republicans, although dominated by conservatives, have had their progressive wings. Democrats, although leaning toward the progressive side, have had their conservative leaven.

But this time, deep currents seem to be cutting two sharply defined channels. Labor, those on relief, a section at least of the farm population, will be on the Democratic side. Business, the higher salaried and professional groups will be largely on the Republican side. Each candidate may try to straddle, as Harding in 1920 tried to straddle the League of Nations issue. But words in such a campaign mean little. The real issue will be recognized by all.

The irony of this is that Roosevelt has functioned to save the capitalist system. We may not have been in danger of a revolution in 1933 but we were not far from some vastly more radical measures than any that Roosevelt has put through. He took the system and made it bend slightly before the storm. Compared with the revolutionary changes which economic distress has produced in some other countries, we rode through our crisis with the merest vibration along the keel.

To get a proper perspective on Roosevelt you have only to note the cynical complaints of the left wingers. They regard him as a fake reformer, who has been kidding the people along in order to save capitalism.

It gives one pause to hear, as this writer has heard, some of the most prominent Republicans say privately that if Roosevelt is succeeded by a reactionary Administration it is likely to be followed by a violent swing to something that is really revolutionary.

There are sound grounds upon which to criticize the Administration. It has been wasteful. It has wandered around with a happy-go-lucky carelessness. Experiments have suffered from haphazard administration and worse planning.

Business men can with sound cause demand better than they have received in this respect. But when they scream about revolution, about Roosevelt ruining the country, about how we have to go back to Hoover—although they haven't yet the nerve to put it that baldly—you would think they are being murdered when they are only having their tonsils out.

Still you do have to admit that it is hard to keep this Administration from going out of bounds. It has outspent its revenue. It has broken outside the Constitution. Now Secretary Ickes says Washington isn't big enough for the New Deal. They have used up all of the office space here and are about to install the overflow in Baltimore.

Lewis Issues A.F.L. Warning At Convention

'Reprisals' to Be Boomerang, Union Chieftain Tells Coal Miners.

By the Associated Press.

Warning to the American Federation of Labor that "repraisals" in connection with its family row over industrial and craft unions would prove a boomerang came yesterday from John L. Lewis.

The president ofthe United Mine Workers of America, largest industrial union in the country, sounded the challange note at the Pennsylvania Anthracite Mine Workers' wage convention.

Lewis recently stirred labor circles by resigning as vice president of the federation and forming a committee of seven to organize workers in steel, rubber, automobile and other large industries along industrial union lines, rather than as machinists, carpenters, etc.

"I do not know what action the federation may take in the future," the miners' chief said, "I do not know whether the representatives of craft unions, frightened by events, may lash themselves into such a mental state as to believe that policies of reprisal may be justified.

"If they do, I warn them that they will injure themselves more than their fancied adversaries."

A few minutes later, the hard-coal miners roared unanimous indorsement of a resolution approving Lewis' stand in the controversy.

Injection of organized labor's biggest internal quarrel into the wage convention proceedings came after the delegates perfunctorily side-tracked resolutions advocating formation of a national labor party to combat "a growing danger of fascism in the United States."

Two resolutions, asserting a labor party is necessary because the Democratic and Republican parties "are not representing the best interests of labor" were referred without debate or a record vote to the union's international convention meeting here next month.

U. S. Credit Unions Show Quick Growth

By the United Press.

Federal credit unions, making loans of less than $200 on a co-operative basis, are adding more than 10,000 persons a month to their membership, C. R. Orchard, of the Farm Credit Administration, said tonight.

In the year and a half since the Federal credit union act was passed, 800 societies have been formed, including more than 77,600 men and women, and approximately $1,300,000 has been saved.

The FCA looks on its credit unions as the "young giant" which will help to destroy loan sharks and racketeering small lenders who have recently been victimizing relief clients in New York City.

Orchard's figures were taken from the September 30 quarterly reports of the unions. They showed that about 30,000 loans had been made in the past year for a total of $1,600,000.

X-Ray Lung Tests Will Be Continued

Public school authorities have given permission to the Health Department to continue its free X-ray examination of persons registered in the Tuberculosis Case-Finding Project.

These places include Miners Teachers College on December 9; Wilson Teachers College on December 10; Bell School on December 11, 12 and 13.

Following this series of X-ray tests, the machine will be moved into Jefferson Junior High School, where the examination of white residents will begin December 16 for men, and the following day for women, the Tuberculosis Society announced yesterday.

plaining his methods, once said to him:

"I see the boys in Washington, take them to lunch or night clubs and discuss the cases then—rather than on the merits."

McElhill, the witness said, mentioned the trips to night clubs after Conklin told him he did not think McElhill could help McCarter and after Conklin asked McElhill whether he (Conklin) overlooked any rulings or decisions in the McCarter case.

Tells of Conversation.

Conlin testified that when he asked how he learned about the $149,000 assessment against McCarter, McElhill said he obtained his information from "some head in the bureau from whom the conferee or the auditor would take orders."

On another occasion, Conlin declared, McElhill told him what the decision would be in an entirely different case 24 hours before the ruling was actually announced at the bureau.

The witness related how he reported his suspicions of McElhill to a revenue agent in Newark, N. J., in June, 1934.

Conlin told the jury he accompanied McCarter to the Treasury when McCarter complained against McElhill in August, 1934, and was present when Morgenthau ordered an investigation by Elmer Irey, chief of the bureau's intelligence unit.

Other witnesses testified there were approximately 30 bureau agents assigned to the case, including men from the Philadelphia and Atlanta, Ga., offices.

The prosecution was conducted by Leslie C. Garnett, United States attorney, and his assistant, George E. McNeil. Leahy's associates included Leo A. Rover and William H. Collins.

Massacre in All Africa Visioned If Italy Loses

London, Dec. 5 (AP).—Lord Mottistone told the House of Lords today he believed white men in Africa would be massacred if Italy loses the Ethiopian war because of sanctions.

"The uncontrolled tribesmen would unie," he declared, "and we would have such a massacre as would beggar description. It would be the end of every white man in Africa."

House Awaits Budget Report To Act on Relief

Buchanan Denies Congress Will Work Out Its Own Program.

Slapping at reports that Congress might be allowed to work out its own relief program without recommendations from the President, Chairman James P. Buchanan, of the House Appropriations Committee, last night said his own group will not initiate any program without estimates from the Budget Bureau.

"It is the policy of my committee to operate only on a basis of budget estimates, and so far as I am concerned, I do not intend to depart from that policy," Representative Buchanan said. "If there are no relief estimates, there will be no relief bill from my committee."

The Appropriations Committee chairman reiterated his belief that the Government should get out of the relief business as speedily as possible. He believes the President will submit a budget, possibly in the neighborhood of $5,000,000,000, and later in the session offer estimates for relief.

"Certainly neither the President, nor anyone else, for that matter, now knows how much would be needed to continue work relief," he added. "Everything depends on how speedily the slack in employment is taken up by private industry. He will not be in a position to know until March, at the earliest. I do not look for relief estimates before then."

Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary said he "had hoped" the President would be able to turn back to the Treasury some $2,000,000,000 of the $4,880,000,000 work relief fund, and at least come "within range" of balancing the budget next session, but appeared pessimistic over the prospect.

Senator Alva B. Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, echoed Buchanan's view that it is "too early" to say how much will be needed for relief. If relief funds are provided, they should be spent only on "wealth-creating public projects," Adams added.

TVA Changes Federal Form, Beck Declares

Attacks in Supreme Court Its Right to Acquire Transmission Lines.

A Supreme Court decision upholding powers claimed by the Tennessee Valley Authority "would change the forms of the Federal Government and the social organization of the American people," James M. Beck, constitutional lawyer and member of the American Liberty League, told the court yesterday.

Speaking for 14 preferred stockholders of the Alabama Power Co., Beck filed a brief challenging TVA's constitutional right to acquire transmission lines to carry power sold to municipalities. Forney Johnston, Birmingham attorney, and another member of the Liberty League, also signed the brief.

Supreme Court justices already have agreed to hear oral arguments in the case December 19. The TVA act is one of many New Deal measures under fire before the court. Monday the justices will hear arguments in Hoosac Hills' test of AAA processing taxes, with John W. Davis, another Liberty League member, aligned against the Government as a "friend of the court."

"National Collectivism."

Beck, who charged the TVA act sets up a "monster co-operative under contract to wet nurse the Tennessee basin States," recently offered to provide legal services through the Liberty League to those who desired support of their constitutional rights. He told reporters yesterday that he personally had taken no cases for the league nor was there any league connection with the TVA litigation.

The Beck brief declared the TVA program "is a deliberate effort to force a coup d'etat, and at the same time perpetuate a dynasty based on national collectivism in power manufacture and distribution."

The case, he said, is "revolutionary in its importance," and presents an "effort of the Government through a board of three men, subject to none of the traditional checks, standards or restraints, to establish the Government permanently in absolute control of the power of a vast region."

Beck said there is no more reason why the Government could enter the commercial power business to reimburse the Treasury for the cost of a dam than for it to conduct a commercial business on a vacant postoffice floor to pay for the structure.

Attacks TVA Board.

He declared the TVA board had resorted to "arbitrary" execution of a systematic plan, "involving the Government in a permanent and inextricable network of utility service, conducted with unctuous cruelty against the investment of petitioners."

"The corporation was created with powers deliberately intended to free it from restraints," the brief continued. "It may at will initiate Federal service at any point within the area indicated, or withhold it, without requiring approval of any public authority. This result obliterates the uniform requirements of the State to protect public service from duplication.

"It may single out existing utilities for competitive destruction with no recourse or appeal. It does not have to condemn properties. It takes them at its own price under a threat of competition. Or it may, careless of the destruction of existing investment, proceed with duplication.

"The theory upon which the program is sought to be justified will, if sustained, place within reach of the discretion of a majority in Congress the ability to place the Government of the United States in every form of collective enterprise, for the production and sale of commodities which might be asserted by Congress to require stand-by preparedness for war or for service of supply or other Federal functions, however remote.

"* * * the proposal necessarily and directly involves a monopoly in fact through competitive exhaustion of the existing utilities and their inability to compete with a government free of taxation, free from adverse consequences of operating deficits, and with unlimited funds to carry out its program and liquidate its mistakes."

Platform of Business Parley

By a Staff Correspondent.

New York, Dec. 5.—Following are excerpts from the platform for American industry adopted at the closing meeting of the Industrial Congress here today:

"Ten million remain unemployed in America and 20,000,000 continue on relief. This situation exists despite an enormous potential demand for certain essential goods and services. Direct relief, although necessary, is no cure for this unemployment and the public works relief program is a demonstrated failure. The only solution for unemployment is re-employment through private enterprise.

"Government efforts to promote recovery have, in fact, retarded it, and brought Government spending far above income. The National Government debt, which has increased to about $30,000,000,000 and is still growing at an alarming rate, must be paid by the present and future generations. The only means of decreasing Government expenditures, debt and tax burdens is likewise through the revival of private enterprise."

"In contrast to the progressive American system of voluntary and individual enterprise, we are asked today to revert to a reactionary and coercive system that denies the rights and freedom of the individual and makes him the servant of government, which in turn assumes and exercises a growing dictatorship over the economic and social life of the people.

"Such Government control undertakes, by inducement or coercion, to cut production to fit apparent demand. This program leads usually to currency debasement."

"The continued increase in goods and services essential for material and social progress is obstructed or defeated by policies which impair or destroy individual incentives and freedom of enterprise. Among such hampering policies are:

"(A) Undue regulation of the financing of business which discourages the flow of capital and credit into private enterprises, or which undertakes to control the volume or direction of such investments. Any abuses requiring correction can better be dealt with by statutes containing definite requirements enforceable by judicial procedure, rather than by constantly changing administrative action.

"(B) Attempts by centralized decisions to regulate or control production. These discourage initiative and improvement, and thus crystalize inefficient methods, uneconomic production and high costs.

"(C) Attempts to regulate for purposes of economic planning hours of work, rates of pay and other working conditions in industry. Such attempts ignore varying local and other conditions and the economic factors resulting therefrom.

"(D) Attempts to regulate the co-operative relationships between employers and employes which prevail for efficient production. These result in creation of discord, strife and impairment of productive efficiency."

"If the Government's efforts to substitute its planning for the individual enterprise system are pursued, private enterprise cannot be revived and again be able to give employment to those seeking gainful occupation."

"Sound recovery, enduring prosperity and integrity of social institutions depend upon the preservation of Government credit, for upon it all other credit, public and private, rests. Policies which conform to tested principles and experience demand:

"(A) Government expenditures confined solely to the proper and necessary functions and purposes of government. This is necessary to prevent destructive taxation, or what is worse, uncontrolled credit or currency inflation.

"(B) A currency maintained upon a dollar of fixed gold content.

"(C) Limitation of the use of Government's supervisory powers over banking and credit solely to the purpose of maintaining the safety of bank deposits and a sound credit structure, thus furthering our national welfare. Freedom from any political influences in the use of these powers, so there may be even no suspicion that policies are designed to stimulate or maintain artificial prosperity with no thought of the morrow."

Heads in Debt To Bethlehem For Securities

$11,114,569 Unpaid on Shares, SEC Reveals; Salaries Listed.

By the Associated Press.

A hitherto secret report showihg officers and directors of Bethlehem Steel Corporation owed the company $11,114,569 as of December 31, 1934, for company stock, was made public yesterday by the securities commission.

Eugene G. Grace, president, was shown to have owed $5,206,079, the unpaid balance on 67,500 shares.

The report consisted of data in the company's registration statement for listing its stock on the New York Stock Exchange. Most of the statement was made public months ago, but this information has been held confidential at the company's request pending a commission review.

Eleven officers or directors, including Grace, were shown to have purchased 130,910 Bethlehem shares under an agreement in 1930. The stock was purchased by company trustees and sold to the officers at an average price of $91.60. The stock recently was quoted on the market at around $50.

Pay by Installments.

The directors were to pay for the stock on the installment plan, but the report showed $3,249,920 was past due on December 31, 1934. This figure, however, included amounts owed on stock bought by other company employes, and there was no indication as to the extent individuals were behind in their payments.

The statement said the company has extended the time for the payments of installments because of business conditions.

Other officers or directors listed as debtors as of December 31, 1934: S. A. Buck, 15,750 shares, unpaid balance, $1,489,036; Hugh Bent, 15,750 shares, unpaid balance, $1,503,196; R. E. McMath, 9,000 shares, $879,143; P. Mackall, 9,000 shares, $825,533; F. A. Shick, 9,000 shares, $750,293; J. H. Ward, 2,250 shares, $221,417; W. J. Brown, 1,080 shares, $101,898; J. P. Bender, 680 shares, $64,785; R. H. Schlottman, 540 shares, $50,164; W. H. Johnstone, 360 shares, $33,025.

The fact that the company paid Grace $180,000 for his services in 1934 and Chairman Charles M. Schwab $250,000 has already been published. The "confidential" data showed this additional compensation: $90,000 each to Quincy Bent and C. Austen Buck; $75,000 to Paul Mackall.

Salaries Listed.

The SEC also made public salaries or business data which a number of other companies called confidential. This information included:

Childs Co.: Salaries, George D. Strohmeyer, New York, president, $15,306; William P. Allen, New York, chairman executive committee, $9,372; Grover C. Buck, vice president, $7,372.

American Machine & Metals, Inc.—Salaries: P. G. Mumford, New York, $33,300; V. C. Stephens, New York, Rahway, N. J., treasurer, $11,300; E. P. Holder, New York, vice president, $9,500; gross sales, $2,531,203.16; cost of sales, $1,782,951.22; gross profit on sales, $748,271.94, as of December 31, 1934.

Anchor Cap Corporation—Sales and rentals of machinery, $7,582,799.32; cost of sales, $5,857,503.57; gross manufacturing profit, $1,725,295.75. After other income and other deductions, net income for 1934 was $527,282.88.

Austin, Nichols & Co., Inc., New York, Connecticut and Delaware—Gross sales minus sales to subsidiaries, $15,923,626.40; cost of goods sold, $13,816,712.18; gross profits on sales, $2,106,914.22, year ended April 30, 1935.

Venezuela's President Reported Seriously Ill

New York, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Private sources from Venezuela today said President Juan Vicente Gomez, 78, who has ruled the country since 1908, is very ill. His condition is believed grave.

Gomez is one of the most picturesque rulers in the new world, a survivor of a generation of army men who ruled various Latin-American countries with a strong hand, preceding the Fascist dictators of Europe by decades.

Opinions Vary On Dry Repeal, Two Years Old

Morgenthau Hails Success, but Foes Denounce It; Plan New Crusade.

By the Associated Press.

The second anniversary of repeal yesterday found Secretary Morgenthau saying "repeal has worked out satisfactorily," and the Anti-Saloon League planning a new campaign for "complete abolition of the alcohol beverage traffic."

Morgenthau, director of the Government's liquor enforcement agencies, told reporters collection of liquor taxes had been satisfactory, the drive on bootlegging had been pushed with considerable success, and that overseas liquor smuggling now is "practically nil."

In convention at St. Louis, the Anti-Saloon League named Bishop James Cannon, jr., as head of its re-established national legislative committee for a "new advance against alcohol."

Drys Blame Roosevelt.

Both Bishop Cannon and Dr. F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the league, joined in placing the "evils" of repeal upon President Roosevelt and in predicting a new dry era by 1945.

Bishop Cannon said he would oppose Mr. Roosevelt's re-election. He offered a resolution, which was adopted, calling on the President to abolish "the use of intoxicants at White House functions."

In contrast to McBride's assertion that repeal had been a "miserable failure," W. H. Stayton, executive director of repeal associates, said poison alcohol deaths now are practically unknown and bootlegging is diminishing.

James M. Doran, administrator of the distilled spirits institute, contended repeal had "brought a definite improvement in the Nation's revenue with a corresponding reduction in lawlessness."

In Alaska, a group of Eskimos started at Nome a campaign for the return of prohibition, condemning the "excessive" use of liquor as "demoralizing to the race."

During the last year 14 States joined the ranks of those which now permit legal sale of intoxicants, bringing the total number to 41.

Treasury officials said the public was consuming legal hard liquor at the rate of only 64 per cent of the pre-prohibition peak. Doran's organization figured Federal revenues from liquor taxes at $199,065,824 for the year ended November 30 as compared with $133,448,779 for the first year of repeal.

Union Pacific Rail Orders.

New York, Dec. 5 (A.P.).—Announcement was made today that Union Pacific Railroad Co's. order for 70,000 tons of rails would be divided among Colorado Fuel & Iron Co., 29,750 tons; Carnegie Illinois Steel Corporation, 29,750 tons; and Inland Steel Co., 10,500 tons.

Holding Concerns Called An 'Economic Waste'

Miami, Fla., Dec. 5 (A.P.).—Rush D. Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, today said holding companies were an "economic waste," in an address before the National Association of Securities Commissioners' convention.

Holding companies, he said, "cried on my shoulder until I had to wear a raincoat about what Congress was doing to widows and orphans."

He accused them of "kiting" values to mislead investors.

"Utilities securities are not based on actual values," he added, and cited figures to show holding companies for utilities arbitrarily increased valuation of assets to sell securities.

Business Wars On Regulations By Government

haps the most significant resolution of the Congress was that on Government relation to industry, presented by James W. Hook, president of the Geometric Tool Co. of New Haven. It particularly stressed fears that increased inflation would lead to another economic crash.

Discussing the NIRA, the resolution said:

"The idea that compulsory shortening of hours and compulsory raising of wage rates by Federal action can result in a public benefit, is disposed of by experience under the codes. The fallacy lies in assuming that because there are certain natural results of prosperity, we can achieve prosperity by legislating these results; effect is mistaken for cause."

Tax Measures Scored.

Concerning taxation, the resolution said:

"Federal taxes should be used only to support the constitutional functions of the national Government. They should not be employed for local purposes, to redistribute wealth or to regulate those matters which the Constitution leaves to the domain of the States."

The resolution demanding repeal of social security legislation came as something of a surprise. It had been expected that the conference would ask for delay pending a further study of the problem.

"The Federal social security act is contrary to the public interest in that it attempts to force uniform treatment of old-age relief, relief of unemployment distress and relief of certain other forms of distress throughout the entire Nation, regardless of local circumstances and environment," the resolution said.

Another resolution pointed to the danger of credit inflation, but made no specific recommendations other than that industry and commerce "must watch the economic system as a whole and do all within their power to prevent the introduction or prosecution of policies which will weaken the national economy."

Interference Charged.

In a general resolution accompanying the platform, the convention said:

"The trend toward Government interference in the economic activities of the country has long been apparent. Within the past three years this movement has been immeasurably accelerated. In consequence the choice cannot long be postponed between preservation of a system of free enterprise and the creation, either by deliberate choice or passive acceptance of a system of Government enterprise involving suppression of the individual by dictates of Government. Unless the present trend is reversed, the inevitable result will be the destruction of the principles which have made possible the great economic and social progress of the United States."

The platform for industry was presented by H. W. Prentis, jr., president of the Armstrong Cork Co., and seconded by Lammot du Pont, president of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.

Prentis warned that centralized government backed by "selfish minorities" will lead to "chaos and dictatorship."

Grave Question.

"Except, perhaps, during the Civil War," he continued, "this country has never faced a more serious fundamental question, namely, whether we shall continue as a representative constitutional democracy or whether we shall follow the path of lavish spending and centralized control by selfish minorities, which history shows leads eventually to chaos and dictatorship."

The convention also adopted a 14-point report on Government finances. It asked that Federal grants or "matching" allotments to States be discontinued; that the RFC be converted into a liquidating agency; that use of public funds competing with private enterprise be discontinued; that payment of the soldier bonus be deferred; that constitutional limitations be placed on State taxation, and that possibility of reducing the number of taxing units be studied.

One speaker clashed with an official of the National Association of Manufacturers. The speaker was J. Warren Madden, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, and the official was James A. Emery, general counsel for the manufacturers. Madden devoted his speech to a discussion of collective bargaining and a defense of labor unions.

Sees Peril to Right.

Madden told the convention that there are forces at work seeking to nullify the legal right of collective bargaining.

"What those forces are, the members of our board are learning by listening to a reading testimony given under oath by employers, employes and intelligent onlookers," he said.

He declared the labor act gives the Government power to enforce the right of labor organization.

Emery, who has been clashing with labor for more than 30 years, replied. He said he expressed "our deep appreciation" for the speaker's candor, and declared that the labor act was one-sided, that it protected the employe, but offered no protection for the employer.

Dr. Neil Carothers, director of the College of Business Administration of Lehigh University, told the convention that recovery was irresistibly on the way, but that business still is beset by dangers, the chief among which are "plans or projects for Government control of industry or finance."

Suitor Wounds Rival, Kills Girl and Self

Chicago, Dec. 5 (A.P.).—A rejected suitor slew the girl who spurned him, wounded her new fiance and killed himself today.

Miss Grayce Osborne, 28, brunette, and Joseph Downey, 27, were killed when Downey terminated a year of futile courtship with a burst of pistol fire in a hotel near this city's gold coast. Lawrence Lampe, 28-year-old son of a physician, was seriously wounded.

Riley Granted Day to Furnish Kidnaping Alibi

Convict Testifies Store Man Here Aided in Detroit Crimes.

Extradition proceedings instituted here yesterday by Michigan authorities for the return to Detroit of Jerry Riley, wanted here on a kidnaping charge, were postponed until today in the District Supreme Court when defense attorneys asked time to produce hotel records in substantiation of an alibi defense.

Riley, former proprietor of a Fifth street cigar store, is alleged to have been a member of the "Legs" Laman gang that operated in Detroit. In court yesterday, before Chief Justice A. A. Wheat, Ray Andrews, who is now serving a term of from 20 to 40 years in Michigan State prison, declared Riley "worked with me on the Kass and Bergman kidnapings."

Assistant United States Attorney Al Krouse informed Chief Justice Wheat that Kass, son of a wealthy banker, was slain in an attempt to kidnap him, while Fred Bergman, also wealthy, was identified as the other victim of the gang.

The charge against Riley is that he participated in the kidnaping of Charles Matler, Detroit produce dealer, September 9, 1928. The kidnapers are said to have obtained ransom of $14,800 for his release.

The hearing will be concluded today. Detectives arrested Riley here when they noticed the resemblance between him and pictures of the man sought in the kidnaping. His attorneys are Harry T. Whelan and William B. O'Connell.

Sees 'Rune' Ahead

Gov. Johnston Defies Carolina Supreme Court

Increases Military Guard of State Offices After Adverse Decision.

By the United Press.

Columbia, S. C., Dec. 5.—Olin D. Johnston, war veteran Governor of South Carolina, tonight defied the State Supreme Court behind a protective fringe of National Guard bayonets.

The 38-year-old Governor answered a ruling of the State Supreme Court invalidating the military coup by which he seized control of the State highway department on October 28 by a call for a new company of State militia.

"Maj. Barnwell still is in control of the situation," said Johnston immediately after the supreme court struck the heavy blow at his military procedure. He referred to Maj. Frank H. Barnwell, National Guard officer in charge of troops dominating South Carolina's $5,000,000 State office building.

Reinforcements Raised.

Barnwell commanded a mere 13 armed troops prior to the supreme court ruling. A few minutes after Johnston was notified of the decision, however, a peremptory order was issued from the executive office for a new skeleton company of 53 men to reinforce the contingent, bringing the total strength of Johnston's armed forces to 66.

The military action of the Governor was without precedent in South Carolina as was the bold military stroke in October by which he swept out of office an antagonistic board of highway managers.

The State Supreme Court ruling today was handed down in actions instituted on Armistice Day by the men Johnston had deposed by military force of the State.

WPA Workers, Docked, Storm Newark Office

Newark, N. J., Dec. 5 (AP).—Five hundred WPA workers, incensed because they were "docked" for the hours they did not work yesterday, stormed the Airport Administration Building and broke windows in several buses in a protest demonstration today.

Police quelled the disturbance. None was injured.

About 1,800 men reported for work yesterday. Some worked an hour and some two before they quit or were sent home because of the cold. WPA officials ruled they should be paid only for the actual time they worked.

Wealth Spread Held Indicated By Tax Returns

Larger Incomes Dwindle but Total of Payers Shows Increase.

Redistribution of the aggregate income of Americans was under way in 1934, Treasury figures issued yesterday would indicate.

Million-dollar incomes declined 30 per cent in number, but the number of income returns filed throughout the country increased by 9 per cent, net income of all taxpayers showed a gain of 14.9 per cent and the tax collected was 35.8 per cent more than in the prvious year.

The totals were made public by Guy T. Helvering, commissioner of internal revenue.

Those Americans reporting incomes of $1,000,000 or more in 1934 numbered 32, as compared with 46 the year before, figures that contrast sharply with the total of 513 in the boom year of 1929.

32 Had Million Income.

The 32 $1,000,000-a-year men reported an aggregate income of $56,659,000, compared with $81,559,000 for the 46 in 1933. In 1929 the 513 reported aggregate net income of $1,212,099,000. The $1,000,000 incomes paid taxes of $31,611,000 in 1934, compared with $25,848,000 in 1933 and with $191,054,000 in 1929.

However, the total net income on the 1934 returns was $12,456,262,491, or $1,610,608,959 more than the year before. Best news of all for Commissioner Helvering was the fact that on this $12,000,000,000 income the tax liability was $506,481,123.00, an increase of $133,513,362 over 1933.

Even more buoyantly cheerful yesterday was Postmaster General Farley, who from New York, announced that postal receipts had increased $44,000,000 in the fiscal year which ended June 30. "I have every reason to believe," Farley went on to predict, "that as large, if not a larger increase will be shown during the present fiscal year."

Farley's Theory of Cause.

The Postmaster General concluded that the Roosevelt Administration "has brought the country well along the road to recovery and prosperity."

Commissioner Helvering's figures would indicate that some citizens got further along the road than others. Those reporting incomes between $5,000 and $10,000 rose from 219,735 in 1933 to 288,178 in 1934. But, rising into the higher income brackets, this rate of increase rapidly tapers off. Incomes from $50,000 to $100,000 were reported by 5,927 persons in 1933 and by 6,073 in 1934. Above this point the tide turns.

Income taxes took 4.7 per cent of the average taxable income reported. These returns, the first filed under the revenue act of 1934, reflect the new normal and surtax rates, the altered credits laws, the new definition of capital assets and the new limits on gains or losses from sales or exchange of such assets.

The number of individual returns, by income classes, follow:

Income.	1933	1934

Sales Tax Near If AAA Loses, Senator Holds

Cocke, National Emergency Council director for Georgia and chairman of the Atlanta homecoming demonstration committee, and several other Georgians.

"Home-Coming" Curtain.

The purpose of the visit was to "ring down the curtain" on the Atlanta home-coming celebration last week, as Cocke put it, by thanking the President for coming to the Georgia metropolis and to accept his thanks for the warm reception given him. But the two Senators and Cocke spent more than an hour discussing legislative proposals with the President. Cocke gave the President a glowing report of improved economic conditions in Georgia.

Senator George said it was agreed at the conference that Congress should be able to finish its task and adjourn between April 1 and 15. The Georgian said that the major tasks facing Congress would be extension and revision of the neutrality act, passage of appropriation bills, revision of sections of last year's tax act dealing with intercorporate dividends, finding revenue with which to pay the soldiers' bonus, should that proposal be adopted, and passage of any legislation made necessary by adverse Supreme Court decisions.

The Georgian did not think that any serious effort would be made to revive the NRA, pointing out that the same objectives could be reached by expanding the powers of the Federal Trade Commission over fair trade practice. He did not regard highly prospects for the ship subsidy bill and thought that the much-debated revision of the food and drug act would succeed only in an emasculated form.

Senator George's inclusion of ways and means of financing cash payment of the bonus among the tasks for Congress and the Finance Committee was taken as a hint that, although he remains opposed to this measure, the President is becoming reconciled to passage of a bonus bill.

The Senator said this prospect created a thorny task for his committee "unless the monetary experts relieve us of the responsibility." A general manufacturers sales tax, however, might produce sufficient revenue to provide for the bonus as well as the sums now produced by processing taxes.

Senator George said that a tax of 2½ or 3 per cent would produce annually approximately $2,000,000,000, based on estimates given to the Finance Committee earlier this year when hearings were held on old-age pensions proposals.

Payment of AAA benefits would not require more than one-third of such sum. Consequently in several years general manufacturers sales tax—if it can get by the opposition of the Progressives in Congress—would produce sufficient revenue not alone to finance the AAA but also to cover the cash payment of the bonus.

As for the revision of the neutrality act, Senator George indicated the President desired more discretionary powers than he has under the temporary statute which expires February 29. The President particularly wishes to have authority to limit the exports of essential war materials, such as oil, cotton linters, etc., to belligerents to normal peace-time levels, the Georgian explained.

The Treasury favors revision of the inter-company divided tax sections of this year's hurriedly passed revenue act to eliminate certain injustices, George asserted.

Cooper Seized, 4 Are Hunted In Prison Break

Detective Chief, Wounded by Fleeing Gangster Convicts, Dies.

By the Associated Press.

Hartshorne, Okla., Dec. 5.—Russell Cooper, former member of the disintegrated "Irish" O'Malley gang of bank robbers and kidnapers, was captured late today near Clayton, Okla. Officers expected quick capture of the other four prisoners who fled with him in a bloody prison break Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Detective Chief Ben Bolton, wounded as he tried to halt the break, died in a Muskogee hospital.

The officers believed Cooper, acquainted with the mountainous country, was the guide for the others after the escape from the city-Federal Jail at Muskogee, during which a sixth plotter was slain.

A fresh posse hurried toward the inland town of Weathers in the Jack Fork Mountain area in southeastern Oklahoma.

Still at large were three other O'Malley gangsters—Dewey Gilmore, of Willard, Mo.; Dan Heady, of Kansas City, and Leonard Short, of Galena, Mo.—and a fifth man, Don Garrett, facing a seven-year Mann act sentence.

Not a shot was fired as Deputy United States Marshal Allen Stansfield, of Ada, and two penitentiary guards arrested Cooper while walking along a road.

A sixth prisoner, John Blackburn, charged with a mail-sack robbery, was wounded fatally by Police Chief Marsh Corgan at the time of the delivery.

Cooper, Heady, Short and Gilmore were convicted in Muskogee Federal Court last week in the $19,000 robbery of two Okemah, Okla., banks last December 22. They were awaiting sentence.

At Washington, it was announced that a Prison Bureau investigator had been sent to inquire into the escape.

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 5 (AP).—George Wilbur Moss, 23, one of the three convicts who escaped from the State penitentiary Tuesday, was captured last night at Tazewell, in upper East Tennessee, Warden A. W. Neely said today.

Neely said the others, Gug McCoig, 22, and Pee Dean, 18, got away in an automobile.

Rep. Casey Warns Hull Of Sanctions Danger

By the United Press.

Clinton, Mass., Dec. 5.—The United States should keep clear of any sanctions against Italy and tend to its "own knitting" Representative Joseph E. Casey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, warned tonight in a letter to Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

Any encouragement of sanctions at this time, Representative Casey said, "would give the impression to a waiting world that we are aligning the United States with the enemies of Italy."

1 Dies, 2 Escape In Wild Sequel To Bank Holdup

Village Marshal, Cashier Thwart Robbers; Four Abducted in Dash.

By the Associated Press.

Franklin, Ohio, Dec. 5.—A determined village marshal and a bank cashier thwarted a bank holdup and killed one of the robbers today, but two other members of the robber gang, one of them wounded, eluded pursuers tonight after a wild dash for freedom in which they abducted two women and later two men.

The marshal also was wounded, but the two women hostages were freed unharmed when one of them, driving a commandeered car under the bandits' guns, deliberately wrecked the fast-traveling machine.

Two Federal agents, scores of highway patrolmen and county police tonight patrolled roads throughout central Ohio searching for the fleeing pair, whose partner dropped a bag containing $7,000 loot as he was slain by Marshal William E. Graham at the entrance of the Franklin National Bank.

Commandeer Truck.

The two fleeing robbers commandeered a bakery truck and two other automobiles in their wild flight after the women's car was wrecked.

Before the attempted robbery, the three men abducted an automobile salesman and mechanic of Middletown, Ohio, and left them, bound with wire and gagged in a shack near Franklin. The mechanic identified the slain robber as one of his kidnapers.

Struck in the ear by a gunman's bullet in the skirmish before the bank, Marshal Graham, with Cashier George Gates, continued to fire at the fleeing pair, one of whom was wounded in the arm.

Virgil R. Groves, a middle-aged electrician, passed the bank as the holdup was going on. He turned off the ignition and pocketed the key of the robbers' car.

Forced to Help.

Mrs. Bertha Burdge, of Miamisburg, Ohio, and her sister, Mrs. Edna Bowlin, driving past in their car, were forced to aid the two bandits' flight.

"They made me drive," said Mrs. Burdge. "I suddenly decided to stop somehow and gave the wheel a jerk and over we went."

With armed possemen close on their trail, the robbers scrambled from the overturned car and set out on foot.

The bandit pair next accosted Alex Janecke, 38, bread-truck operator, and Frank Cadem, his assistant, both of Dayton. They rode away in the bakery truck.

Near Yellow Springs, the men forced Janecke to block the road with the truck. They stopped a couple, ordered out the driver and sped toward Springfield.

They abandoned the coupe near Clifton, 9 miles south of Springfield, stole their fourth machine and fled toward Osborn.

Jail Ends Whirl Of 3 'Gay Spot' Looters of Rich

Two Prisoners Claim to Be Sons of Prosperous Californians.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 5.—A dizzy whirl of 11 months through Broadway's gay spots ended tonight with jail for two young University of California graduates and their brunette girl friend, accused of financing their expeditions from the loot of hundreds of rich Westchester and Nassau County homes.

They were held in jail at suburban Scarsdale, while police officers of Westchester County communities and of Mineola, Long Island, reported identification of gems, clothing and furs alleged to have been stolen.

Those jailed and held for the grand jury, are:

Edwin G. Chester, 28, who described himself as a former football player and graduate of the University of California at Los Angeles. His father, he said, was a wealthy Fresno (Calif.) resident.

Merlyn Williams, 25, who said he is the son of a fruit grower at Modesto, Calif., and who also described himself as a U. C. L. A. graduate.

Mrs. Mary Black, 30, who was held as a material witness when she was reported to have inadvertently told police of the pair's activities. She was mentioned by one of them in an unguarded moment during police questioning.

Lieut. Joseph Faulkner, of the Scarsdale police, said that most of the loot had been sold, but that police found in Mrs. Black's apartment a scale for weighing gold and testing acid.

Suicide Try Fails On Execution Eve

Slayer Uses Wood Dagger Made From Stool.

By the United Press.

Eddyville, Ky., Dec. 5.—Eulie Lutheridge, scheduled to die in the electric chair shortly after midnight, failed in a suicide attempt in the death house of Kentucky State Prison early today, Warden Tom Logan revealed tonight.

Lutheridge, sentenced to die for the murder of Theodore Fitchen December 6, 1931, fashioned a dagger from a rung of his wooden cell stool and jabbed an artery in his left arm in the suicide attempt, Logan said. Lutheridge lost considerable blood before he was found on the floor of his cell by Guard Captain M. E. Ambrose.

Early tonight Logan called doctors to determine Lutheridge's sanity.

The condemned man was convicted of robbing Fitchen, clubbing him to death, then faking an automobile accident and setting fire to Fitchen's car, in which the two men had been riding.

Bruno to Make Own Last Plea In Death House

there was no law prohibiting it. He also indicated the case would be reopened if Parker or anyone else found valid new evidence.

Egbert Rosecrans, of Hauptmann's counsel, thought Parker was investigating the case only because of general interest in the crime. But it remained a puzzling feature of a case that has seen Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon disappear on mysterious trips into the Northeast, along with rumors of new evidence found in New England.

The visit of the Court of Pardons to Hauptmann is contingent on action of the United States Supreme Court, which may come Monday. The court has before it a petition to review Hauptmann's case on the ground that his constitutional rights were violated in the trial at Flemington.

Should the court reject the petition, Hauptmann's only resource would be the New Jersey Court of Pardons. If the petition is granted, a date will be set for lawyers to argue before the Supreme Court.

Hoffman made his secret visit to Hauptmann around October 15, and he went alone, about 9 p. m. So well were his movements hidden that no knowledge of the trip became public until tonight. Apparently Hauptmann did most of the talking while the Governor sat in the death house and listened.

For almost the first time since he was arrested, Hauptmann was on his own—fighting with his own brains and tongue instead of listening to lawyers making pleas in his behalf. This is the way Mark O. Kimberling, principal keeper of Trenton State Prison, described the Governor's visit to Hauptmann:

"Gov. Hoffman came to my house on the Second street side of the prison and we drove around to the death house side on Third street. We instructed the driver to come back in about three-quarters of an hour. There were no extra arrangements for the Governor's visit except that I told the center keeper that th guard in the death house was to turn his keys over to me.

"No one knew of the visit. The Governor waited in the death chamber, where the electric chair is located, while I went in and told Hauptmann that the Governor was coming in and to pull himself together and not get excited. I then beckoned the Governor to come in and I had the officer on duty go out. I took charge of the death house I then went to the other end of the death house and I could not, of course, hear what the Governor and Hauptmann talked about."

In New Jersey the Court of Pardons possesses the pardoning power that rests solely with the Governor in many States. Besides Hoffman, the members are Chancellor Luther A. Campbell and Lay Judges George Van Buskirk, Walter L. Hetfield, jr., Joseph A. Dear, Harold B. Wells, Johhn T. Rafferty and William Wolfskeil.

Neither Lloyd Fisher, Hauptmann's chief counsel, nor Attorney General David T. Wilentz, who prosecuted the case, would comment.

Letters Back Post Campaign as 24 Persons Contribute $59.

Contributions to the Edith Maxwell Defense Fund soared above the $500 mark yesterday when 24 separate amounts totaling $59 were received by The Post. It was one of the largest sums received in a single day since the fund was started 11 days ago.

Letters accompanying the contributions expressed appreciation for the aid being offered the 21-year-old mountain school teacher in her efforts to secure a new trial. All of the writers considered her 25-year sentence "most unjust" and "a miscarriage of justice." The girl's father died from a blood clot an hour after she hit him on the head with a slipper in self-defense.

Excerpts from letters written by contributors to the fund include:

"Inclosed find check for $5 to help in the defense of Edith Maxwell. I am glad to see the press take this issue up in regards to justice, not especially this case, but all cases."

"What that community needs is missionaries—a lot of them—well trained for heathen lands, to inculcate in the minds of even the 'good' church people there the rudiments of Christianity."

"A verdict more worthy of the Dark Ages than of present-day civilization."

"Here's to The Post. Your efforts in behalf of Edith Maxwell are a shining light against the murk and stupidity of the world. Your paper gets better and better."

Hero's Welcome Given To Italian Commander

Rome, Dec. 5 (AP).—Marshal Emilio de Bono, returning commander-in-chief of Italy's African armies, received the welcome of a conquering hero today.

Premier Benito Mussolini met the aged "Conqueror of the Tiger" on the station platform. Afterward, Italy's newest marshal reviewed a guard of honor and, amid great applause, went to the ministry of the interior to receive a welcome from the Fascist hierarchy. Marshal Pietro Badoglio has taken his place in East Africa.

needy children anxious to have their little ones share the toys.

One mother wrote:

"I heard of your kindness to the needy children of Washington last year, and I wondered if you could remember my children this Christmas. My husband was on relief, but has been put to work on the PWA, for which I am very thankful, but we have to pay our living expenses before we can think of Christmas.

"I have five children, but the two oldest boys do not look for any presents. The three little ones are those I would like to have a pleasant Christmas for. Richard is 3, Billy, 10, and the girl, Jacklyn, 11. Just some little toy to let them know that Christmas is the same as in other years."

"Christmas is the same as in other years." The motive behind The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund is to preserve the faith of little children in households where willingness to work, inadequate income and self-respect go hand in hand.

The readers of The Washington Post may be assured that through their Christmas offerings this little family and all five of the children will know what it means to have a merry Christmas this year "as in other years."

Another message came to The Post Toy Fund from Marjorie, "only 7." She has a 5-year-old sister, Molly, and a little brother, Jack, 3. Her widowed mother is kept busy earning their livelihood, so Marjorie took upon herself the job of providing Christmas for the children.

"Dear Santa Claus," she wrote: "I know you are very busy and I hate to trouble you, but perhaps you will read this when I tell you about my little brother and sister. Mother is working and we have food but no money for toys. My sister wants a doll and my brother a drum and a ball. I like books. I like dolls, too, but do not send me anything if there is not enough for the other boys and girls."

Bridge Fall Fatal.

San Francisco, Dec. 5 (AP).—Ed Corell, 31, San Francisco, fell to his death from the East Bay cantilever of the San Francisco-Oakland Bridge today. His was the seventeenth fatality since start of construction of the $78,000,000 structure.

Chain Store Sales Gain.

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—Sales of F. W. Woolworth Co. for November were $23,407,123 compared with $22,332,126 in November, 1934, an increase of 4.8 per cent.

S. S. Kresge Co. reports November sales at $12,268,552 compared with $11,285,287 in November, 1934, an increase of 8.7 per cent.

Edith Maxwell Writes Letters To Her Friends

Girl Spends Day Answering Sympathetic Notes From Hundreds Over U. S.

By Virginia Lee Warren.
A Staff Correspondent.

Wise, Va., Dec. 5.—While five other women prisoners in her dark cell pawed listlessly through worn magazines, 21-year-old Edith Maxwell spent the greater part of today in answering some of the hundreds of sympathetic letters she has received from all over the country.

Denied all visitors except members of her family, the pretty young mountain school teacher, in jail here since last July for killing her father with a slipper, whiled away the hours by writing postcards to newfound friends.

A few cells away sat round-faced, 16-year-old Haugeman Falin, brought here last Saturday from his home in Wildcat Valley after shooting his father with a shotgun.

Both Edith and young Falin claim they acted in self-defense; Edith, when drunken Trigg Maxwell tried to beat her and threatened to break her neck for staying out after dark with a neighbor boy; Falin, when his father advanced on him with a pistol after an argument over responsibility for a breakdown of the family car. The elder Falin was drinking.

Visited by Family.

The boy's mother, brothers and sisters came to see him last Sunday, his first full day in jail. They have not been back.

Edith's mother, Mrs. Anne Maxwell, came up the road from her home at Pound, 13 miles away, a couple of days ago to visit the girl. It was one of the few times mother and daughter have seen each other since the trial almost three weeks ago when Edith was convicted of first-degree murder. She was sentenced to 25 years in prison.

The Maxwell girl's older brother, Earl, who has been visiting her almost daily since last July, didn't come up from Pound today. Neither did her little sister, Mary Catherine.

But despite the absence of any callers, Edith seemed "in pretty good spirits," according to the jailer, Jim Dotson.

"She's been reading right smart, mostly magazines and letters," he continued. "She's getting about 15 letters a day now. Yes, they've dropped off considerably lately but she still gets enough to keep her mind busy a good piece of the time. The Falin boy? Oh, he seems contented. He don't make any fuss."

Preliminary Hearing.

Falin is to be given a preliminary hearing Monday on a murder charge. Since the Commonwealth's attorney, Fred B. Grear, has admitted the youth appears to have "a good case of self-defense," he may be released at the hearing.

Edith Maxwell is doomed to spend at least two and a half months more in her basement cell. Even if she is granted a new trial by the man who sentenced her, Judge H. A. W. Skeen, it will be in March at the next term of court before the hearing gets under way.

She has lost weight since she was brought to the old red brick jail last July. Her skin has taken on a prison pallor which she tries to conceal with rouge. But her deep blue eyes are clear and bright. She seems sure she eventually will be acquitted.

Silent on Appeal.

Meanwhile her attorneys—A. A. Skeen, R. P. Bruce and W. W. Dotson—refused to hazard a guess on the outcome of their pending motion for a new trial. The judge has indicated he will answer their petition next Thursday. If he should deny the motion, Edith's lawyers feel certain the court of appeals, which convenes at Wytheville in June, will look favorably on their suit.

"We feel confident we won't have to carry it any farther than that," said Attorneys Skeen and Bruce today.

It was Skeen's idea that the young school teacher should answer the letters of sympathy she has received since she was sentenced. He sent her a stack of postcards—it's easier for the jailer to censor them than letters—and Edith began to write.

"Letters from people she never even heard of, telling her they are standing back of her, have done more than anything else to keep her spirits up," said the tall, gray-haired lawyer today. "The least she can do is write them notes of thanks. Besides, it keeps her mind off her sufferings for a little while."

3,500 Clerics Pledged To Seek Security Laws

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 5 (AP).—The National Religion and Labor Foundation reported tonight that in response to a questionnaire, roughly 3,500 religious leaders in the United States had pledged themselves to work for such social legislation as old-age pensions, unemployment insurance and the child labor amendment.

Novelist Honored.

Paris, Dec. 5 (AP).—The Prix Goncourt, France's most famous literary prize, was awarded today to Joseph Peyre for his novel, "Sang et Lumiere" (Blood and Light).

Tydings to Wed D. C. Divorcee After New Year

Mrs. Cheeseborough Will Be Bride of Senate's 'Most Eligible.'

tea cups, speculation was general as to when the handsome Maryland lawmaker would wed. Very recently his impending marriage to Mrs. Cheeseborough was taken for granted, lacking only official announcement and confirmation.

Since his election to the Senate in 1926 Senator Tydings has been a popular figure here. He was born in Havre de Grace on April 6, 1890, and was graduated from the University of Maryland law school. In 1913 he was admitted to the Maryland bar.

When the United States entered the World War he enlisted as a private and rose from the ranks to emerge a lieutenant-colonel when he was honorably discharged in 1919.

During his service in France Senator Tydings was cited many times for valor. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for bravery under fire and in September, 1934, he received the decoration in a ceremony at Fort Myer. This was for gallantry exhibited in the fighting at Estrayes Ridge and Samoeux, where he was exposed to enemy fire and assisted in the capture of flame throwers and machine guns.

Her Brilliant Debut.

After the war Senator Tydings became Speaker of the Maryland House of Delegates and later State senator. He was elected to the Sixty-eighth and Sixty-ninth Congresses before going to the Senate.

Mrs. Cheeseborough has lived away from Washington since her marriage some years ago.

In her debutante days, however, she was considered one of Washington's most beautiful and popular belles. As Eleanor Davies she was presented to society at a brilliant reception. At this time she still was a student at Vassar and remained here only during vacations.

Immediately after her graduation she was married to Mr. Cheeseborough and moved to Asheville, N. C. She is the eldest of three sisters, the others being Mrs. Ada Walker, of New York, the former Miss Rahel Davies, and Miss Emlen Knight Davies, a student at Vassar.

Davies' former wife, Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies; his daughter, Mrs. Cheeseborough, and Mrs. Hutton received divorces last September. Mrs. Davies got her divorce in Carson City, Nev., September 23, and a day later dispatches from Reno were carrying news of her daughter's divorce.

Honeymoon on Yacht.

Mrs. Hutton is the former wife of Edward F. Hutton, New York financier, and an aunt of Countess Barbara Hutton von Haugwitz-Reventlow. She won an interlocutory decree from Hutton in the New York Supreme Court. They had been married 20 years.

Mrs. Hutton's philanthropies have made her as widely known in the New York slums as she is in the salons of Newport and Washington. In tenement sections of West Side New York she has been known for many years as "Lady Bountiful." She also financed the construction of emergency hospitals in France during the war. Her only child, Nedenia, 11, was awarded to her custody.

It was understood Davies and Mrs. Hutton will spend their honeymoon aboard the yacht received by the bride-to-be from her former husband as part of her financial settlement. The yacht was tied up at Annapolis, Md., yesterday and advices from there indicated it was en route to Baltimore for refitting. Formerly the Hussar, renamed Sea Cloud, the craft is one of the largest yachts afloat.

Senator Tydings recently purchased a historic old estate, Oakington, in Maryland, near Havre de Grace, and during the last few weeks his bride-to-be has spent much time there, conferring with landscape gardeners and decorators, at work on her future home.

SENATOR MILLARD E. TYDINGS.

300,000 Urge Senator Norris To Keep Post

Letters, Petitions Pour In; Drive to 'Draft' Him Is Expected.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Lincoln, Nebr., Dec. 5.—Nebraskans—300,000 of them—have taken literally President Roosevelt's advice to attempt to keep George W. Norris in the Senate, George W. Kline asserted today.

The publisher of a weekly political newspaper, Kline said petitions and letters from all over the State have poured into his office requesting the veteran Senator definitely to decide to seek the office again.

Kline estimated the signers of the letters and informal petitions totaled more than 300,000 persons.

"All have but one thought," Kline said, "and that is that Norris must not be permitted to retire from the United States Senate. They make no mention concerning whether he should seek office as a Republican, a Democrat, or a Progressive. They ask only that he not quit the Senate."

As a result of the cascade of pleas, Kline said a campaign to "draft" Norris for another term probably will be mapped within a week. Formal petitions seeking to put the Senator's name on the ballot as an independent candidate will be ready for circulation by then. The organization which conducted the successful campaign for Norris' unicameral Legislature amendment for Nebraska, will circulate the petions, Kline said.

Norris has always run on the G. O. P. ticket in the past and has been lebeled a Progressive Republican. But Kline said he expected the Senator would campaign as an independent.

President Roosevelt recently said that Norris should be kept in the Senate, willing or unwilling, "as long as he lives." His statement came after press dispatches indicated Norris would not seek reelection.

Mooney Holds 'Fixed' Jurors Convicted Him

Prisoner Directs Testimony at Hearing as Defense Counsel Withdraws.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Dec. 5.—Thomas J. Mooney took personal command of his freedom fight today and charged jury fixing in his bombing trial.

The aging life-term convict aggressively directed the questioning of witnesses at his habeas corpus hearing, ordered documents produced and returned to the stand himself.

He drew from Judge Franklin Griffin, who once sentenced him to death, an admission that the court clerk was discharged some years after the 1916 Preparedness Day bombing trial when a grand jury investigated jury fixing in other cases.

Judge Griffin said, however, he "never suspected any irregularity in drawing of the Mooney jury."

At Mooney's side was Attorney John F. Finerty, who plans to withdraw tomorrow and let the prisoner conclude his case alone.

Frank P. Walsh, of New York, and George T. Davis, of San Francisco, withdrew yesterday, stating they declined responsibility for further testimony in his behalf. They will return to represent him when the State starts its case.

Mooney testified he was told by an imprisoned lawyer in San Quentin Prison: "I know all about your case."

The attorney, C. Vincent Riccardi, allegedly brought about the grand jury investigation of trial fixing in 1920 when he demonstrated he could have a selected list of 12 names drawn from a venire box.

"From what he told me," Mooney testified, "by every reasonable deduction I believe the same transactions went on in my case."

Rescue Party Near Lost Flier, Belief

Lavarre Reaffirms Faith in Redfern Reports.

By the Associated Press.

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 5.—William Lavarre, jungle explorer who returned recently from South America, today reaffirmed his belief that Paul Redfern was alive in the almost impenetrable hinterland of Dutch Guiana.

Here to address the Rochester Ad Club on his experiences as an explorer, Lavarre commented on reports the eight-year-missing Rochester aviatior was sought by an expedition headed today toward the treacherous jungle where the Brunswick, Ga.-Rio de Janeiro nonstop flier is believed to have crashed.

"Art Williams is a very good pilot and knows his jungle work," Lavarre said. "In my opinion it will take about seven and a half hours to reach Redfern's position."

Lavarre said that he was skeptical about reports that the long-lost aviator was alive when he first came to Dutch Guina, but later was convinced they were true. He said that Bjukas, wild black inhabitants, tell of a plane that flew over their villages about eight years ago and that he has checked the story of two Indians that they had seen the crippled flier.

The Lutheran Rebellion.

A little over a year ago German Lutheran congregations were being exhorted by an aroused clergy to resist the "arbitrary rule and the unspiritual regime of the Reich Church government." The tense state of feeling aroused by the high-handed methods used against the evangelical church constituted one of the most serious threats to the Nazi dictatorship that had then arisen.

While the attacks upon the national church organization did not take the form of direct denunciation of Hitler himself, they came perilously close to seditious utterances. The situation moreover did not lend itself to easy solution since the established Lutheran Church in Germany is a formidable power that even a dictator might well hesitate to goad too far.

For a time, therefore, the Nazis appear to have judged it wise to forget some of the things said and done by the leaders of the Protestant opposition. But according to current reports from Germany the controversy between the so-called church rebels, who are really fighting against loss of long-established rights and privileges, has again reached a dangerous climax. Last Sunday numerous Prussian pastors denounced the government from their pulpits as aiding and abetting the introduction of heresy into the teachings of the German Protestant Church. These statements were made in open defiance of police orders that all announcements and reports to church councils should first be submitted for censorship. To avoid compliance with this order, the pastors decided to read their statements from their pulpits.

Defiance has been carried still farther in the decision to disregard an order depriving the church of all administrative authority and prohibiting the rebel pastors from conducting ordination ceremonies for new candidates for the ministry. With characteristic lack of humor, the representative of the Nazi government, the minister for church affairs, pleads for tolerance while seeking to enforce submission. The opposing church group declares that there can be no toleration of heresy. In that firm utterance lies a threat that is probably as great as any that the Hitler regime has so far encountered.

Men who will submit tamely to invasions of personal liberties will often resist assaults upon their religious convictions with unbending determination. In thus arousing the deepest instincts of revolt, the Nazi government is certainly playing with fire. For Germany is changed indeed if the ideas of Adolf Hitler really mean more to its people than the traditions handed down from Martin Luther.

Funds For Security.

Representative Buchanan's move to "chloroform" the $93,000,000 third deficiency bill, which Huey Long filibustered to defeat in the last session, can not fairly be represented as unfriendly to the social security program. It is true that Mr. Buchanan, as chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, is deeply and properly interested in trimming expenditures. But there are other considerations which support the logic of framing a new bill to make funds available to the Social Security Board.

At the close of its last session Congress was in an utterly reckless mood. No further illustration of that attitude is needed than the attachment of riders providing 12-cent loans for cotton and 90-cent loans on wheat to a measure intended to finance a carefully worked out social security program. Those extraneous amendments still cling to the bill. If a new deficiency appropriation measure could be presented without too much delay, that would be the preferable course. For the measure could then be more easily confined to its central purpose.

Furthermore, as Mr. Buchanan points out, a smaller sum than was contemplated last summer will be required to carry on the social security program during the last half of the fiscal year. The beneficial effects of the pensions and allowances will be postponed for a few months. But they could not wisely be made retroactive. The effect is a saving at the expense of the aged, the blind, etc., which, unfortunate though it seems from the humanitarian point of view, must logically revert to the Treasury.

In a period when economy has become an essential criterion of every policy it is necessary to restrict the budgets of all agencies to their minimum needs. To appropriate a larger sum than is actually necessary would be an extremely bad precedent for the social security program, even though its management is of the most efficient caliber. Having in mind the importance of ultimate success, the board will doubtless be the first to appreciate the desirability of keeping appropriations at the minimum consistent with efficient operation.

Despite its lack of adequate funds, the Social Security Board has made an excellent beginning in a truly gigantic undertaking. Its co-operation in revision of the last deficiency bill in line with strictly essential requirements for the next six months would carry a step further the prestige it has already won.

"Sound Middle Ground."

In his address before the National Association of Manufacturers, Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president of General Motors, warned his audience that any failure to recognize or discharge the responsibilities that rest upon industry will bring more and more Government interference. With equal vigor he affirmed that the general welfare of the Nation cannot be advanced by embracing the theory of scarcity that has dominated New Deal policies. The objective of industry, as he says, should be a reduction in real costs and in the selling price of goods and services, accompanied by a better-balanced distribution of the Nation's income.

This admirably concise statement of the conditions essential to economic progress does not, however, meet the question of how these desirable objectives are to be attained. Apart from urging a public-spirited recognition of industry's duty to the community, Mr. Sloan offers no definite program of action. His advice to the assembled manufacturers resolves itself into an injunction to resist Government interference with their business, to stand "united and adamant" against any form of political management, "irrespective of degree." Naturally, therefore, Mr. Sloan is skeptical as to the value of the industrial conference to be convened in Washington next week by the NRA. It will, he thinks, "inject uncertainty just at a time when recovery is being accelerated."

Although he admits that co-operation with the Government is essential, Mr. Sloan makes it clear that, in his opinion, the mutual confidence and mutual respect which constitute the basis for successful co-operation are lacking at the present time. That is all too true, and for creating that disastrous situation the present Administration is very largely to blame. But even so, it would be tactically wiser for industry to assume that reliance can be placed upon the good faith of administrative officials who announce that the forthcoming conference is merely an honest effort to assess the lessons of NRA experience.

Nor is it desirable to assume that the time is not ripe to initiate a discussion of many pressing problems that will not be solved, although they may momentarily be forgotten, as prosperity returns. In the period when markets were expanding rapidly and the consuming capacity of the people was increasing, free competition with maximum production as the goal of endeavor was clearly in the public interest. At present, however, many of our industries (unlike the automobile industry) are in a relatively stagnant state. In the era ahead marketing and distributive policies will properly receive much of the emphasis which in the past has been placed on production programs. In a transitional economy the question of regulation cannot be evaded merely by denouncing its unwelcome aspects.

It is also essential to keep in mind that industry is now shackled by anti-trust laws of a vanished era. That legislation commits us to a regime of enforced competition which may entail a greater measure of bureaucratic interference with private business than reasonable regulatory laws of a more comprehensive sort. Additionally, in the legitimate jubilation over the demise of the NRA with its many extravagant manifestations, industrialists should not forget that most of the trade-practice agreements embodied in the codes were put there because representative groups of businessmen wanted them and drafted them.

The emergency legislation that Mr. Sloan properly denounces has failed because it was hastily conceived, too ambitious in its objectives and too imbued with the erroneous theory that higher prices necessarily lead to greater prosperity, even if they are the result of scarcity. There is no doubt that the objectives of government regulatory policy are in need of redefinition but it is futile to urge complete freedom from control. That would be neither politically feasible nor economically desirable. Moreover, labor will be well represented at the forthcoming conference prepared to formulate wage and hour demands, undeterred by any inadequacy of employer representation. The NRA officials certainly show no hostility to business in regretting that this should be so.

As Mr. C. L. Bardo, president of the manufacturers association, observes, business is not confronted by a choice between complete laissez faire on the one hand and socialization of industry on the other. There is a "sound middle ground" permitting scope for the free play of private initiative within the limits of regulation required to prevent exploitation of the public. It is high time that this golden mean should be seriously sought by representative business men, and in that quest the lessons learned from NRA seem well worthy of joint industrial consideration.

The Advisory Council Idea.

Reorganization of the Business Advisory Council, "to study and report on specific problems of economic and general business importance, long-term economic planning, and similar matters," is especially interesting because of the difficulties that have beset this potentially useful agency. The council might easily have decided to disband because of the unsatisfactory conditions under which it has had to operate. That it has not done so suggests confidence on the part of some members that this agency may develop into a far more important instrumentality of government than is the case at present.

Secretary Wallace has suggested creation of a "Council on the General Welfare," with prestige comparable to that of the Supreme Court, to advise the Government on vital matters of policy. His plan goes far beyond the functions of the existing Business Advisory Council, but both have grown out of a common need. Laws of the greatest economic importance are now enacted under the pressure of interested groups, and with a view to partisan advantage. Nonpolitical and disinterested expert criticism of such legislation, in advance of Congressional action, would probably save the Nation many costly blunders.

The influence of the advisory body organized by Secretary Roper has been minimized by the suppression of reports deemed incompatible with Administration policy. Only a few of its recommendations have been made public. In some instances measures referred to the council for study have been enacted into law before a report could be made. Moreover, members who resigned from the council last May accused the President of using favorable reports for political purposes, while those unfavorable were carefully guarded from the public. In these circumstances no advisory group could function satisfactorily.

Efforts are now being made to strengthen the position of the council. Chairman Kendall expects the President hereafter to submit measures of economic import to his organization before they are sent to Congress. If followed consistently, that plan should obviate one of the council's major difficulties. Many others remain to be solved. Until both the impartiality of the group and the right to make public its own reports are established, its usefulness will necessarily be limited.

Something less cumbersome than the 52 seats in Secretary Roper's council of businessmen would be sufficient for a permanent advisory body. In such an organization, moreover, the representation of practical businessmen might well be balanaced by far-sighted labor representation, with a few economists of established reputation to hold the balance even. Under the direction of such an agency continuous research might be applied to the study of economic trends and the critical examination of policies designed to advance the national welfare. The resultant advice should represent not so much the consensus of current opinion in business circles, as the thoughtful and matured conclusions of detached experts.

Such a body might well exert a powerful and constructive influence over the country's thinking on economic subjects. Of course, an advisory council would not be permitted to interfere with the legislative functions of Congress, but it might serve as an invaluable guide for both Executive and Legislature. And, during the transition from one administration to another, it could provide certain elements of continuity that are now deplorably lacking. In short, a well-informed, impartial and widely experienced council of economic statesmen should be able to mitigate the fluctuations attendant upon political government, and to point the way toward consistent lines of national development as a constructive alternative to promiscuous and haphazard experimentation.

Strain On Neutrality.

Among the materials of war which were overlooked by the congressional ban on trade with belligerents is an invisible export. The wild Walegas of Ethiopia, we learn from a recent dispatch, have imported as marching songs, "Dixie" and "The St. Louis Blues," rendered by trombone and saxophone.

America has, of course, exported songs before, often into startling surroundings. Tourists in search of exotic atmosphere have been deeply discouraged to hear Andalusian gypsies sing the strains of "Old Black Joe," or to see the gavotsky danced to "Old Zip Coon." Others have been amused to see British audiences stand at the end of a movie for "God Save the King" and then march out to "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

There is somehow less incongruity in this Ethiopian instance. We can easily imagine Cab Calloway leading the Walega squadrons before the Emperor, chanting the "St. Looey wo-o-oman." And "Dixie" still retains, throughout years of abuse by blackface minstrels, a military tinge from old association with the rebel yell and the lost cause.

But it is too much to think of Bedford Forrest or Stonewall Jackson singing an accompaniment to anything played by a saxophone.

Mussolini says the Ethiopians refuse to co-operate with him. Well, a fellow dodging bombs and bullets at all hours of the day and night has precious little time left in which to do any heavy co-operating.

No Such Impression Intended.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Tuesday's editorial, "Injurious Uncertainty," about the power companies and the Wheeler-Rayburn act, gives the impression that the poor innocent holding companies are being mercilessly hounded by a vindictive Government.

Judged from the point of view of the consumer of gas and electricity and the many holders of now worthless holding company "securities," these companies have only their own hoggishness and stubbornness to blame for any plight in which they may now find themselves. In fact, when the history of the power industry is written to date, it will unfold one of the most amazing episodes of greed and dishonesty in American history.

My electric light bill in Washington for last month was about $2.50. My home town in southern Michigan is served by a subsidiary of one of the large holding companies—one whose record of fighting State regulation, of charging exorbitant rates, and selling watered stocks and bonds is notorious. In that town, this same amount of electricity would have cost about $5.50, over twice as much as in Washington. Yet I read that the company supplying the power to the Capital is very prosperous and that, based solely upon the ownership of some of this company's stock, the stock of a holding company sells for over $600 a share. It isn't hard to imagine the huge profits that the other holding concerns are realizing on the capital actually invested in their properties.

There is only one alternative to public ownership and that is reduction of power rates to return a fair rate of interest on the capital actually invested in the physical properties used to supply the service, and a restriction of the right of unlimited issuance of "securities," with which the holding companies have hitherto flooded the country.

Unless the holding companies officials are wise enough to see these facts and to submit to strict Federal regulation, any "victory" they may win in having the Wheeler-Rayburn act declared unconstitutional will prove hollow indeed. For the only alternative which will satisfy an aroused public is Government ownership and operation of the utilities. The hundreds of millions that consumers pay annually in excessive rates for power are too high a price for the imaginary "private initiative" of the present set-up.

No Noose Is Good Noose.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a layman, that is, as one who feels he cannot afford to pay to listen to a Town Hall Forum, I am intrigued by the L'affaire Ludwig et al. I am indeed in a jovial mood at the antics of humanity; besides my new hat was sadly missed by the starling brigade and their Italian marksmanship has me aflutter with joy. I intend to buy the starlings a cake, well, maybe two cakes. After all, the proletarians should eat cake.

Mr. Ludwig displays remarkable reticence for an exile; unlike Mr. Strachey, he not only refuses to debate the issue but refuses to debate with his enemy. I am inclined to believe that Mr. Ludwig has not read Louis Adamic or even the milder reportage of Erskine Caldwell regarding the terror in the South. I am disappointed. Our own Senator Carter Glass retorted publicly that he would not care to have anything to do with the German government so long as the Nazi party was in power, and the Hon. Carter Glass is not an American exile (yet).

The Town Hall Forum reveals that even the local George Washington University can harbor a Nazi or pro-Nazi professor on its faculty. This is not a revelation; indeed, it is the only logical conclusion of the result of our local red baiting by the patriotic witch-hunters. Let them hunt, I say, and be damned. They are building a Fascist America and it is destined to make this country a place unfit for human habitation in a very few years and the subsequent upheaval is bound to place a noose around the necks of the witch hunters. I suppose this will be noose to them.

After all, Washington is only a flag-stop for political hacks and it has never been noted for its culture beyond the fact it successfully keeps all the good shows on Broadway. Out of such ruins Fascism is born.

Three Steps From Relief.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What about the man only three steps from the relief? Has our Government helped him? Have the banks loaned him a dollar? Not yet. How about the small business man? Has any help been given him? These are forgotten men. People in this bracket have put up the strongest fight in this depression. These men are the so-called middle class. The down and outs have been put on the dole. The wealthy class and owners of big corporations and our bankers have been loaned large sums of money by the Federal Government.

Have our young men the same chance to establish a business that they had 25 years ago? The chain stores have taken over 75 per cent of the grocer business in this country and the chain restaurants have taken over the lion's share of the restaurant business. Now we have hotel chains, steel chains, motor-car chains, oil chains. In other words, the young man of today is forced to be a cog in a wheel. Chained for life to some big corporation or combination in our business set-up.

The President took over a million of our sons from the Hobo Trail and put them in CCC Camps. This was a wonderful thing for these young fellows, but they can not stay in CCC Camps forever. They must be placed in a position to earn a living, make a home, get married and raise children like Americans have always done.

How are we to set these young men up in a business? Can you answer this question? I cannot, and thousands of mothers and fathers are wanting to know what is to be done about it. Let's hear about this puzzle from other mothers and fathers, about what these young men are facing in a great country loaded down with peace and plenty, but out of the reach of many.

Suggestions For Jury Reform.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I claim offhand that Edith Maxwell, a teacher, was not tried by "her peers." The state of mind of 12 mountaineer men, proud of their unquestioned authority over their women and households, would seem on the face of it to preclude a prejudiced and unfair verdict in a case in which one of their own dominant station had been killed. They naturally but unfortunately viewed this killing as a threat to their self-ordained authority, however harsh, abitrary and unreasonable it might be.

But the fact can not be denied that custom gives these mountaineer men their unquestioned authority over the household. What is an answer to obtaining a less partial legal justice in these cases? It is one that applies, I believe, equally to all parts of the United States. It is the establishment of two jury reforms. Jurymen should be made a permanent staff of specialists of each State judicial system, holding office for life or a long period, removable only for cause, and attracting public respect and confidence on the same basis as judges of courts. These specialists should include lawyers, psychologists, sociologists, criminologists, and those versed in the particular customs of the various jurisdictions. It should be a staff under the State judicial system that would allocate them for sufficiently long periods to the various subdivisions. In this manner the spirit of expertness and impartiality would dominate. If recognition must be made to the traditional method of forming juries, a certain number, preferably not over 50 per cent or 6 out of 12, could be drawn from residents of the locality where the trial is held.

The second suggested jury reform with reference to its present make-up and operation is that a unanimous verdict need not be required. I believe that this change would promote a greater degree of sincere individual honesty on the part of jury members and consequently a fairer verdict. When a reasonable doubt exists in the minds of a small minority of the jury matters extraneous to the merits of the case or their real conclusions may force this minority either to compromise or to yield to the verdict of the majority. Such matters are lack of rest and home comforts, business considerations, loss of time and money, costs of a new trial, the personality and persuasiveness of a member of the jury. In other words, individual jurymen should not feel that a unanimous verdict is essential when they enter to cast their first and only ballot after due deliberation, as this method envisages. The freer they are to render their honest conclusion on a first and only ballot the chances of a verdict on the merits of the case would be greater.

Offhand, a proportion of 9 out of 12 would appear satisfactory for a verdict. The jury system was originated at a time when organized life was relatively simple and uncomplicated as compared with it today. So functional specialization of jury service is today highly desirable. One need only recall the play "Ladies of the Jury" to get an idea of what these suggested reforms would tend to eliminate.

Are They Growing Up?

Postoffice, Friday.

FOR quite some time—ever, in fact, since we ourselves shed our sophistication — the suspicion has been increasing in us that the sophistication of modern youth was a symptom of juvenality. Now comes, in the morning mail, a letter asking a cheerful question which touches upon this same suspicion.

"Is the sophistication of contemporary youth," this letter inquires, "passing?

"The other evening," writes the writer—he's the Column's expert on German food, Joseph Danziger, no less—"I went to the movies to rejuvenate my soul; rather a strange quest at the movies, but then the film was 'Peter Ibbetson.' The lady who habitually accompanies me on such occasions opined that it would be too sentimentally Victorian for modern consumption. But to me it seemed charmingly mystical—nor to me alone: the young things in the audience liked it.

"Permit me to protest at once that I do not hold with those who condemn a thing merely because it is Victorian—or Edwardian either: an age closer in my acquaintance. The automobile is the type of our present culture and dominates it. But who that has enjoyed a canter on the back of a Tennessee thoroughbred—who that has held the lines over a pair of spirited trotters—would not still prefer that form of locomotion to sitting behind the wheel of one of Mr. Ford's, and his fellows', productions?

"The nostalgia of middle-age? Maybe so. Yet whenever this age in which we now live produces raconteurs who are the peers of Barrie and James — painters the equals of Degas, Sargent, Monet—composers as great as Wagner, Brahms, Tschaikowsky—there may be leisure enough to look down-nose at the Victorians and their prewar successors. If that be nostalgia, make the most of it!

"So I pass from the movie to a vaudeville show recently shown in this our Washington.

"Thereat I was compelled to listen to a microphone singer. As a ballad-vocalist, he was not half bad; he sang a Mexican ballad with verve and eclat—fortunately, the censor knew not Spanish, or I should never have heard the second stanza. However, the singer next obliged with a croonolog extolling the thermal qualities of his inamorata: the sort wherein 'blue eyes' rhyme with 'true eyes,' 'infinitesimal' with 'duodecimal,' and wherein croon-license permits 'I am at the bottom of the muck-heap, but you are at the top.'

"Physical departure would have been too conspicuous. I sat back and concentrated on standard deviations, dispersions and other statistical subjects by which I earn my daily bread. But did the young things in the audience like the croonolog any better than I did? Such observation as my state permitted brought negative replies...

"Doubtless you heard Alexander Woollcott by radio the other night, when he talked of old songs. He told how two New York regiments, moving in opposite directions along a French road on a rainy wartime night, greeted each other by humming—since singing was forbidden—'Give My Regards to Broadway.' And then he quoted George M. Cohan as saying that there was one song which, after 40 years, still appealed to him as the best of the popular ditties, because words and music were in perfect accord. Whereupon—presto! — George himself stepped to the 'mike' and, in better voice than I had ever heard him in on the stage, sang 'Only One Girl in the World for Me.'

"This brings me to my concluding piece of evidence that the younger generation is beginning to share some of my sentiments, even if it has no nostalgia complex.

"I was coming down the Hudson on the day boat—so called because the trip ends in the dark. The usual jazzers, crooners and piano-sitters had been disturbing the lovely moonlight. The weary crowd of Sunday excursionists had been listening (if you can call it that) with every symptom of boredom. It was a crowd almost entirely composed of young people—of just the sort of people for whom that sort of 'music' is written.

"Then the band struck up a medley of old songs: 'Rosie O'Grady,' 'Maggie Murphy,' 'Sunshine of Paradise Alley.'—And what happened?

"The moment the players, abandoning the hot mama stuff from Tin Pan Alley, turned to the strains of those old songs, these young people sat up. They began to sing. They went on singing. They called for encores till that middle-aged boat vibrated as if she, too, thrilled to memories of 'Bedelia' and 'Sweet Marie.' Sophisticated youth? Everyone there was a romantic ready to applaud a Tony Pastor, to cheer a Chauncey Olcott.

"Don't you think the bright young people of today are growing up at last?"

Well, perhaps, Mr. Danziger—perhaps. Anyhow, we hope it. Lots of young people do grow up, you know.

The only thing we ever had against many of them was the fact that the process took so long.

Fair Enough

War And Hate.

Rome, Dec. 5.

THE arrival in Italy of your correspondent, who was a buck-toothed American reporter in England in the spring of 1916, has been a stirring but very sad reminder of those days. The British at that time were engaged heart and soul in the patriotic work of hating Germans. They hated them in print, they hated them by word of mouth and they hated them in mass and each one apart. German music was a disgusting noise; German scientists were fakers; German merchandise was junk.

Within a year a great English patriot, who died crazy by deliberate misinterpretation of the word wrote "Kadaver" in a captured German military document, offered the English people the idea—which they were by then only too eager to believe—that barbarian Germans, in their dire necessity, were now boiling their own dead to obtain grease for their motor transport. "Kadaver" in this case referred to dead horses.

• • • •

THIS fury seemed silly and pitiful, but there was no sense in pointing out that they had thought enough of Germany in the past to import some German royal blood, that their own scientists and intellectuals had found much to admire in Germany and that many an old personal friend of forgotten days before August, 1914, was now fighting on the other side. It only made them wilder to remind them of these things.

They were doing without food, lights, train services, private automobiles, and an English merchant who offered for sale an article from his pre-war stock bearing the loathsome inscription "Made in Germany" would have been tossed into jail as a traitor to the brave boys who were dying in the mud along the Somme.

The League of Nations, in meeting at Geneva a few weeks ago, voted to impose a boycott on Italy for her plain violation of the League Covenant in moving into Abyssinia with an army. There's no doubt about the violation, but there's no doubt, either, that the Italian expedition is a worse threat to Great Britain than to the Ethiopians, who have only their independence to lose but many modern conveniences to gain, including shirts, trousers, gold teeth, salvarsan treatments, jitney buses, movies, plumbing, taxes and parades.

• • • •

NEITHER is there any doubt that the Italians were gypped by the British and French in the distribution of old German colonies after the war to end war. The Italians had a contract with the Germans to fight on their side, but made a secret agreement on the side to help the British and French instead, in return for which help they were to get theirs. Just pals, you see. And then the British and French gave them a royal trimming in the distribution of loot. Again, you see, just pals.

Italy lost more than 600,000 men who thought they were fighting for king and country, and in the end got a few rotten islands and some other odds and ends, but none of the colonies which had been promised her by the nations with whom Americans finally palled up under the sentimental slogan of "No Annexations, No Indemnities."

It's less difficult now to understand the psychology of American racketeers as they change their mobsters and form new alliances, compromising old grudges. Most of them are of Old World origin or stock, and if they had stayed at home they might have been eminent statesmen with medals to wear on their shirt fronts and titles to their names.

• • • •

ITALIANS have been fighting, if you could call it fighting, a lot of tattered, disorganized, barefoot tribes of no centralized loyalty. The enemy they hate is not the enemy they are fighting. They hate England. They hate England almost as intensely as England hated Germany in 1916. They believe in their hearts that England put the League of Nations up to the job of voting a boycott.

In this they are more right than wrong, for the English, with their muddling-through exterior, are shrewd traders, and they have put themselves on the side of peace and justice and rights of small nations in this case, and put England in wrong.

An Englishman in Italy today is regarded as an enemy, although Italy has no formal war with England. Americans, because they speak English, are regarded with evil suspicion and subject to insults. It is unwise to carry an English newspaper. On the train from Genoa to Rome today a waiter in the dining car was not inclined to be civil until an Italian officer from the steamship Rex whispered to him that those were not English at the next table but Americans.

• • • •

I LEFT my hat and a copy of the London Times on the seat in my compartment while I went to dinner. When I came back the Times had been spread over my hat and the hat had been sat upon, although it was a Borsolina, made in Italy and bought in New York six weeks ago.

In all public schools children are being taught to hate the enemies who double-crossed Italy, cheating her of pay which she was to have received for double-crossing Germany. But Public Enemy No. 1 is England. They do without food, heat, light and luxuries because they hate England.

But don't try to tell an Italian that all this will pass or to remind him of the days in 1918 when Londoners came pouring down into Italy off the Somme in their Forty-and-eights to help out in a rather pressing emergency. This is one of those phases such as the English themselves went through. The English should be the last to criticize the Italians.

Britain Awaits Naval Conference

Editors And Admirals Combine To Prepare Mind Of Public.

By Edward Acheson.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

FOR the naval conference which is threatening London this month, the British government is happily prepared. Its word of honor as a collection of gentlemen and officers has been pledged, first, to "continue its unremitting efforts toward disarmament," second, to "fill in the gaps in the national defense."

Hence, whatever happens England can not level a charge of inconsistency against her present rulers; in no conceivable circumstances can they fail to live up to their commitments. But, there is little speculation as to which aspect of the solemn electoral pledge the government will have to be faithful.

Already the British experts have broken the bad news to the country. The defenses of the empire, according to the best available information, are not only a myth but a shambles.

• • • •

TAKE the army. Field Marshal Viscount Allenby should know if anyone does. And he says, "During the last ten years the money we have spent (about $4,000,000 a week) on war equipment and preparation, apart from maintenance, would hardly suffice for an average South American republic." Perhaps his choice of comparisons wasn't very happy, but the lesson is obvious: the army is in a bad way; lots of gaps to be filled there.

And for the flying services, the Marshal of the Royal Air Force, Sir John Salmond, speaks. The situation is, apparently, pretty hopeless. "At the present time Great Britain is capable neither of subscribing its quota to a combined security, nor of defending itself at home or its large straggling empire overseas." He sees some chance, however, if he is given a free hand, and if the other nations will oblige by standing still for two years. In that time home security can be fairly well established by trebling the British machines, which will give a nice margin of about 300 over the Germans and French. That level, he thinks, would be "moderately satisfactory."

So much for England herself: the empire is a different question. There, Sir John feels, "we should be unwise to rely on League assistance." Presumably the largest air force in Europe, plus "League assistance," can just about defend the British Isles. But that leaves the empire at the mercy of person or persons unknown.

• • • •

FOR instance, Singapore has only 30 shore-based aircraft and Japan has "declared" 929 fighting planes. Certainly parity must be achieved at Singapore, because as Sir John so rightly says, "Reinforcements could be flown there from India, but if Asiatics were to attack the white races it is probable that squadrons could not be spared from that quarter." India and Ceylon need at least 100 "shore-based bombers and reconnaissance aircraft" to help out the futile seven squadrons now stationed there.

The Italian situation has made necessary the strengthening of Aden and the equipment of brand-new forces for Egypt and the Sudan. Kenya and Uganda will also come into the picture now, and the Suez Canal defenses "should be trebled." Which, summed up, means that England would have an even break if attacked in the air simultaneously by Japan, Italy and "the Asiatics," combined with either France or Germany.

Sir John makes no provision against an American massed air advance on Bermuda, nor the chance that Chile might take a crack at the Falkland Islands. But the lesson is plain: the gaps in the air defenses are yawning.

Hence, with the army and flying services in such a pitiable state, it is natural that England should turn again to the sea, and stake her all on the navy. But one glance at that once proud institution, through the eyes of Admiral of the Fleet Earl Beauty, is quite enough to make any loyal Briton hang his head.

• • • •

THE thing is simply a wreck. Here are the figures as compared to 1914:

Fifteen capital ships today as against 69.

Fifty-seven cruisers as against 108.

H. M. S. RENOWN.
Policeman Of The World?

One hundred and sixty-one small craft as against 216.

Fifty-one submarines as compared to 74.

Personnel: 150,000 instead of 300,000.

Total tonnage, almost halved.

What is to be done? According to Earl Beatty "first of all, the battle fleet needs to be strengthened for it is the foundation of the whole structure of naval strategy. It must be too strong for any enemy to beat, or even to risk fighting." Which, in British eyes, please note, is quite different from Germany's desire for an army so big that no one would "risk fighting it:" the latter is militarism. The Earl estimates the total additional cost to fill in the gaps in the British navy at $750,000,000; the $600,000,000 a year now expended on the navy merely sufficing to keep it inefficient.

However, the experts apparently overdid it a bit, because a rebuttal was not only invited, but practically demanded. It came from Sir Stafford Cripps when he remarked that if the $4,730,000,000 spent on the British navy since the war had produced nothing that the cognoscenti considered even seaworthy, then someone at the admiralty must be seriously troubled with sticky fingers.

Which, one should hasten to add, has not been the case. The British public has become convinced of the unhappy condition of the navy only because of a habit common to naval experts the world over.

• • • •

IT is characteristic of the genus forever to compare national armaments against some hypothetical standard of perfection. Hence, it comes as a very solemn thought to the Man-in-th-Pub that England "has only two postwar battleships." Something of the solemnity falls away, however, when it is realized that England's inadequate "two" comprise just 50 per cent of all the postwar battleships in the world, the United States and France boasting one apiece.

The same is true of cruisers. England has "cut down to the bone; only 19 have been completed in the last ten years." But, during the same period, the United States added 15, Japan 12, France and Italy 11 apiece; comparative figures which are never given in the experts' public statements. Always England's sea power is staked up, and unfavorably, against "a thoroughly modern navy." The fact that no thoroughly modern navy exists in the world today doesn't seem to enter into the experts' calculations.

With this type of "spade work" already completed in the English press, it is somewhat rhetorical to ask what attitude the British delegates are likely to take in the forthcoming conference. The British psychology is conditioned by two wholly unalterable ideas, first that the British navy is not, and never can be, considered an instrument of aggression by any other nation on this planet. The second is that the Americans are just a little amusing in being wary of the Japanese. Any reference to the problem of defending the West Coast of America draws an audible chuckle from a British audience. "We're a bit nervous of Siam, too," is the usual rejoinder.

COUPLE to these basic ideas the record of the "National" government at Geneva. There the British delegates took their stand on four points: they opposed limitation of expenditure, they objected to the conference dealing with limitation of fleets, they rejected a proposal to abolish battleships and they opposed the reduction of all fleets by one-third.

Hence, it becomes obvious that in naval matters England has "needs." These needs are nobody's business but England's. Other nations may want navies for all sort of sinister purposes: Great Britain has to have hers to preserve the freedom of the seas. So ingrained is this thought that it almost never emerges from the subconscious. The British are not hypocrites in these discussions; they merely assume that no other point of view can exist. This is made beautifully clear by Earl Beatty: "If we have to do so, we shall again build up the British fleet to a condition of fitness to do its work in the preservation of British peace and world peace."

Compare that statement with President Roosevelt's: "In the light of world conditions it was imperative to increase the strength of the American Navy to a degree commensurate with America's needs, interests and responsibilities."

The phraseology is, I think, significant. Notice that the American speaks of America's interest and responsibilities. The Englishman tacitly assumes that British peace and world peace are perfectly synonymous.

• • • •

AND in the meanwhile the third important element in the forthcoming conference, the Japanese, are saying very little, merely demanding parity.

For an American commentator comes the observation: "Should the conference fail it will be the bounden duty of the United States to lay down a program of naval construction of such magnitude that other naval powers will find themselves bankrupt should they attempt to keep pace with us."

An English admiral says: "Failure to reach agreement at the forthcoming naval conference may, of course, necessitate an even more extensive program of battleship construction."

And the Japanese just want parity.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Post-Football Problem.

With the college football season over, the American public now faces the harrowing problem of how to spend its week-ends in warmth and comfort again. This is no simple matter. Finding himself dry, warm, cozy and sober at 5 p. m. on Saturday afternoon is going to make the football fan pretty disagreeable at first.

• • • •

It will take several weeks to get used to the change. Too abrupt a shift is bad for the nervous system and we advise tapering off gradually until finally you can spend from Friday afternoon until early Sunday morning in complete comfort with anguish.

• • • •

At first you will miss the cold slab of cement, the biting gale, the snow, sleet, the rain . . . the fine old Saturday afternoon with your feet all wet . . . the rare three hours of sitting in a puddle of ice water! A heated room, a soft chair and complete immunity from pneumonia, la grippe and the sniffles will just about kill you.

• • • •

Taper off easily by all means. The first week-end it is best to go to the football stadium and spend an hour or so in it even if there is no game. You will get the old feeling of being half-frozen to death.

• • • •

The second week it would be advisable to go to the stadium and merely walk around it once or twice, taking three or four drinks, and then returning home.

• • • •

By the end of the third week you should be able to keep away from the bowl and find satisfaction merely in walking through deep puddles across open fields muttering, "Why the hell do they make you park a car this far away!"

• • • •

By the fourth week you will be almost cured. You may then get all the football day thrill by opening a window and sitting on the sill with your legs dangling in the December gale. (If you can do this in your underwear and waving a flag it will be all the better.)

No End Of Books

By Theodore Hall

Mostly Pictures.

BACK in 1929, when he introduced Peter Arno's collection of drawings called "Parade," William Bolitho composed five pages of sensitive if entangled writing, and had quite enough good thoughts to fill. Sample: "Now Peter Arno, though he is as unapostolic as a Patagonian, has a central theme buried somewhere, which is unprotected. Underneath every leaf he draws in fact, is this: The troubles of an embryo American aristocracy, the absurd hardships it suffers from a vulgar unadaptable reality. The very type of this situation is the bather who wants his chin seized for a moment, but has no chin." There is much else, founded on a working knowledge of Leech, Cruikshank, Forain, Daumier, Grosz and showing above all the caliber of the author. Not alone William Duranty mourns Bill Bolitho.

Now comes the latest portfolio of work from that Paganini with the crayon who was born Curtis Arnoux Peters, jr.—a plump swatch entitled, catchingly, "For Members Only" (Simon & Schuster, $2.75)—and Stanley Walker, the erstwhile city editor, contributes one brief page of introduction. "The bathroom is the great leveler," he opines; "Nudity brings us to the great truth that, no matter what our so-called station in life may be, we all belong to a jovial brotherhood." Which is about all that can be said.

For even Bolitho would have been no happier at introducing this present collection. Like any first-year life class student, Peter Arno has become smitten with the nude and his crayon positively whoops with delight. Scarcely two facing pages fail to exhibit this anatomania, with appropriate catch-lines. One or two or three examples will seem very funny, and 40, unless you are a sophomore or travel in hardware, will pall. It is, merely and simply, too easy a vein of humor. More interesting is Mr. Arno's new departure—imitation snap-shots of high society at play, full of cheerful malice. And yet this is but an air on one string.

No, I'll go back to "Parade," to the real range and depth and sting of the man. The new book is just too limited, too much "For members Only." But if you qualify, being still amused, walk right in and chortle.

FOR the sportsman who shoots over dogs, or for the dog lover who holds the warmest place in his heart for the sporting breeds, there couldn't be a book of drwings more to be cherished than this elegant portfolio, Margurite Kirmse's "Dogs in the Field" (The Derrydale Press, edition limited to 685 copies, $25). Here they all are—Irish, Gordon and Llewelyn setters, pointers, cocker and springer spaniels, golden and Labrador retrievers—delineated in a great variety of poses, portraits and action pictures, on these large full-page plates. The artist's crayon will not stun you with its "smartness" or virtuosity. But it will please you, deeply and endlessly, by the warmth and fidelity of its understanding. John Taintor Foote writes a foreword, and six of the plates are duplicated on loose sheets ready to be framed. A de luxe publication in the best of taste, and one the dog lover will prize.

TO BEGIN the study of American art, in almost everyone of its phases from painting to photography, you will find a vade mecum of the first rank between the covers of "Art in America: A Complete Survey" (Reynal & Hitchcock, $2.75 until January 1; $3.50 thereafter).

Edited by Holger Cahill, art authority, and Alfred H. Barr, jr., director of the Museum of Modern Art, New York, and sponsored by a number of prominent art organizations, it presents, in text and in amazingly lavish illustration for the price, a running account which will surely draw you into closer study. The second section, post 1865, appeared last year. Now, in one volume from 1600 to the present and in a range from Gilbert Stuart to Charlie Chaplin, we are treated to the American arts with intelligence and distinction.

IF, AS a topic, the conservation of our natural resources has left you somewhat lukewarm, you will become a rabid enthusiast after going through the pages of "American Conservation in Picture and Story" (American Forestry Association, $2.50). For here you will find how the fight started to save our forest and wild life, and how that fight is progressing. In dozens of handsome or stirring pictures, and in the persuasive text, the conviction will be brought home to you that conservation is every citizen's job.

Ovid Butler, editor of the American Forests Magazine, has compiled this book for the moral. Forest fires and drouth and vanishing water fowl will stir up your blood. But if you're just naturally apathetic, enjoy these pictures for themselves alone—and pray that someone else will have the spunk to save such scenes for your grandchildren.

House Sends Sharp Demand To Hopson for Data on Income

O'Connor Threatens Head of Associated Gas & Electric With Contempt Proceedings Unless He Forwards Promised Information.

A bluntly worded letter, "demanding" personal income data from Howard C. Hopson, head of the Associated Gas & Electric Co., under threat of House contempt action, yesterday was dispatched to the utilities magnate by Chairman John J. O'Connor, of the House Rules Committee.

Hopson was given until December 16 to supply the information sought by the House utility-lobby investigating group. O'Connor told newspapermen he had "lost patience" with Hopson who had agreed to volunteer the information months ago.

The letter was dropped in the mails as Postmaster General James A. Farley made what amounted to the Administration's third gesture of reassurance to utility holding companies that they will not be prematurely prosecuted for failure to register with the Securities and Exchange Commission by December 1.

Farley's General Order.

One penalty suggested for non-registration under the holding company law was denial of the use of the mails to companies that did not comply.

In a general order to all postmasters yesterday, Farley said he "does not intend to exclude any company from using the mails, at least, not before the validity of the law is judicially determined by the Supreme Court."

Previously both the Securities and Exchange Commission and Attorney General Homer Cummings had announced there would be no immediate criminal prosecutions for failure of holding companies to register. Only 60 have registered to date, while the great majority of the larger firms have taken their case to the courts.

O'Connor previously had requested and received from the utility executive information on the source of the A. G. & E.'s lobby funds.

O'Connor Emphatic.

To repeated requests for data on Hopson's own salary and other compensation from Associated's various interests, the official had replied that these figures were scattered through records of the company now in the hands of the New York district attorney.

"You were directed to furnish the committee a detailed statement of the financial returns to you from your connections, direct and indirect, with the Associated Gas & Electric Co.," O'Connor said in his letter to Hopson.

"As you well know, the committe desired this information in advance of the resumption of your examination and relied on the good faith of those promises, which have never been carried out.

U. S. Refinery Selects Naples For Oil Plant

Action Result of Tariff Change, Not Embargo, Declares Brown.

By the United Press.

New York, Dec. 5.—J. A. Brown, chairman of the executive committee of the Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., Inc., today said a large refinery would be constructed by its Italian subsidiary at Naples, in keeping with a plan announced last July. The refinery will not be put into operation before the spring of 1937, he said.

Brown's statement was in response to inquiries as to whether the construction of this refinery, understood to cost several million dollars, was connected with proposals to place an embargo on shipments of oil to Italy.

He explained that the plan was developed as a result of a change in the Italian tariff in 1933, long before the outbreak of Italo-Ethiopian hostilities or the discussion of sanctions.

His statement follows:

"Announcement of the purchase by Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. of a refinery at Naples and Socony-Vacuum plans regarding it was published in the daily and trade press in this country last July. A full account appeared in the Oil and Gas Journal, issue of July 18, and in the daily press, July 20.

"The Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., through a wholly-owned subsidiary, the Vacuum Oil Co. S. A. I. has been marketing lubricating oils in Italy since 1889. Vacuum Oil Co. S. A. I. is an Italian corporation with headquarters in Genoa and is subject to Italian law.

"At the end of 1933 the Italian government changed its tariff schedules and put into effect new petroleum legislation with the object of requiring companies distributing petroleum products in Italy to obtain supplies from local refineries. A similar requirement has been in effect in France for a number of years.

"To protect our position and comply with the new law, the Vacuum Oil Co. S. A. I. purchased in the summer of 1934 a refinery at Naples, formerly owned by the Petrofina Co. of Belgium, after reaching an understanding with the Italian government that the company would be granted an amplified refinery license to manufacture lubricating oils in Italy, and to distribute locally gasoline and other products which result from refinery operations. The refinery is expected to operate on a crude run of about 3,000 barrels a day.

"Vacuum Oil Co. S. A. I. is now in the process of enlarging the refinery for this purpose. Under the most favorable circumstances the enlarged plant cannot be completed and put into operation before spring, 1937. During the coming year Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. will probably be called upon to ship its Italian company specialized and patented equipment which cannot be manufactured there."

Substitutes Sought.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Rome, Dec. 5.—Assurances by Fascist sources that an oil embargo would mean war reflected today the gravity of the fuel shortage threatened by an extension of sanctions against Italy.

The Fascist regime sougnt by reduction of gasoline consumption, use of substitutes, and development of new sources for oil, to forestall motor fuel shortage arising from any further penalties imposed after the December 12 League of Nations meeting on an oil embargo.

The Italians also were watching the United States closely for further indications of the attitude there. The United States has been furnishing about 6 per cent of Italy's oil imports, but could, if desired, meet all Italy's emergency requirements.

Italy has been importing about 2,300,000 tons of petroleum products a year, and produces itself only about 30,000 tons.

Church Heads In Reich Fear Mass Arrests

Secret Head Warns Synod Leaders Their Stand Is Treasonable.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Dec. 5.—Leaders of Germany's Protestant Confessional (opposition) synod were said tonight to expect wholesale arrests after receiving notification their opposition to the Nazi administration of churches constituted treason.

Chief Hartmann of the church affairs section of the secret police told the Rev. Gerhard Jacobi, president of the Berlin synod, and the Rev. Peter Scharf, president of the Brandenburg synod, that the joint action of their synods yesterday was treasonable.

The Berlin-Brandenburg group declared opposition to an official edict removing administrative rights from church groups opposing the government's administration.

The two pastors were warned that any further steps in the direction in which the Confessional synod leaders are moving would be dealt with and punished as "high treason."

Hartmann, wearing the uniform of the Schutz Staffel, or Nazi picked guard, said he acted upon orders of Hans Kerrl, Nazi head of church affairs, who issued the edict designed to strip the Confessional Synod of its powers.

A group of 180 Lutheran delegates had signed a resolution yesterday saying the edict "violates the internal life of the church and its freedom in expounding God's word."

The Rev. Mr. Jacobi and Scharf were said to have replied to Hartmann's warning that Christ also "died the death of the traitor" and that they were following Jesus' footsteps by declining to obey Kerrl's orders.

Confessional leaders asserted that in no time since the Nazi assumption of powers had the situation looked so precarious for them. They also said they expected to be informed shortly of the resignation of members of Kerrl's national and state committees because they were not in accord with his "coercive" methods.

Chester Gray Praised.

Formal commendation of the work of Chester Gray, assistant corporation counsel, was expressed in a letter written to him yesterday by the District Commissioners. The Commissioners letter was prompted by "the splendid work and excellent brief" of Mr. Gray in the $700,000 tax suit of the Federal-American National Bank.

Fletcher Scores U. S. Projects As 'Scandalous'

Delay in Allotments Seen as Plan to Use Funds for Election.

The record of allotments and expenditures in the "pet set-ups" of the Roosevelt Administration "amounts almost to a national scandal," Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican national committee charged last night.

In a statement discussing use of the $4,000,000,000 work relief fund, he cited figures from the November 1 Treasury statement, which he said showed that eight months after the fund was appropriated "only one-fourth of it actually was expended to furnish work for the unemployed, especially the swivel chair boys in overcrowded offices."

He then asked:

"Is it possible that in view of the much advertised budget balancing feat about to be attempted by the President that these unallocated and unexpended balances are to be used in charging off part of the tremendous deficit at the end of the fiscal year and if so, what is to become of the millions of unemployed whom the Administration was going to put to work?"

"Or, has the expenditure of these vast sums been deliberately delayed until 1936 when its expenditures can be more usefully employed for election purposes?"

After listing appropriations for various agencies and what they had spent up to November 1, Fletcher said:

"But the situation in the pet setups of the Roosevelt Administration amounts almost to a national scandal. The Rural Resettlement Administration was created by the President and handed a Prof. Tugwell who was to rehabilitate the under-privileged in the rural sections."

"The President gave Mr. Tugwell $3,500,000 for relief of agricultural areas of which Prof. Tugwell has not expended 1 cent as yet. He was given $20,000,000 for soil erosion and stream pollution work and hasn't spent 1 cent of this. He was given the enormous sum of $131,000,000 for rural rehabilitation. Of this he has expended a little over 3 per cent, about $4,000,000.

"The Treasury statement shows that Prof. Tugwell's total expenditure up to October 31 was $8,056,398, and of this, almost one-half, to be exact 48 per cent, has gone to office overhead, housed in rich and overstuffed palaces in Washington."

Fletcher said overhead expenses of $192,495 in the Rural Electrification Administration had taken up 100 per cent of the agency's outlay, and that Harry L. Hopkins' Works Progress Administration had spent $10,874,632 for overhead and $45,655,756 on work relief.

Laval Cabinet Saved by Pledge To Left Groups

Herriot Secures Agreement to Act Against Semi-military Units.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 5.—Premier Laval saved his cabinet today by agreeing to the demands of the radical Socialists that he act against semi-military political groups such as the Rightist Croix de Feu.

Edouard Herriot, former premier and leader of the radical Socialists, announced after a conference with Laval that the premier had accepted his program "with minor reservations."

Herriot's Leftists, in a violent debate in Parliament, demanded dissolution of the so-called "political troops," but hostility of the radical Socialists toward the cabinet was lessened after the meeting of Laval and Herriot.

Observers felt that Laval, if he holds the confidence of the Leftists, would be free to continue his Italo-Ethiopian peace negotiations.

There was a report, however, that some members of the Radical Socialists were unwilling to entrust the present cabinet with supression of what the Leftists call "Fascist" leagues, which include, in addition to the Croix de Feu veterans' group, the Francists, and the Young Patriots.

Pierre Taittinger, leader of the Young Patriots, and Xavier Vallat, a member of the Croix de Feu, led the Nationalist counterattack on the Leftists, accusing the popular front groups—particularly the Communists—of semimilitary organization.

While insults were shouted across the chamber and deputies pounded on their desks, the Nationalists insisted that the Leftist organizations should be disolved if the Nationalist groups were to be disbanded.

Coincidently, the secret trial of a member of the staff of the Communist newspaper Humanite and a mechanic charged with spying started today at Brioude.

Ethiopia Arms Licenses Revealed by Runciman

London, Dec. 5 (AP).—Walter Runciman, president of the British Board of Trade, announced in Parliament today that Great Britain had issued three licenses in the last two months for exportation of war materials to Ethiopia.

These, he said, were for 480 military swords, 39 ceremonial swords and 2,000,000 rounds of ammunition.

Text of Hull China Statement

The text of Secretary Hull's statement on the north China situation follows:

In reply to inquiries by press correspondents in regard to the "autonomy movement" in North China, Chinese and Japanese activities in relation thereto, and the American Government's attitude, the Secretary of State said:

There is going on in and with regard to North China a political struggle which is unusual in character and which may have far-reaching effects. The persons mentioned in reports of it are many; the action is rapid, and covers a large area; opinions with regard to it vary; what may come of it no one could safely undertake to say; but, whatever the origin, whoever the agents, be what they may the methods, the fact stands out that an effort is being made—and is being resisted—to bring about a substantial change in the political status and condition of several of China's northern provinces.

Unusual developments in any part of China are rightfully and necessarily of concern not alone to the Government and people of China, but to all of the many powers which have interests in China. For, in relations with China and in China, the treaty rights and the treaty obligations of the "treaty powers" are in general identical. The United States is one of these powers.

In the area under reference the interests of the United States are similar to those of other powers. In that area there are located, and our rights and obligations appertain to, a considerable number of American nationals, some American property, and substantial American commercial and cultural activities. The American Government is therefore closely observing what is happening there.

Political disturbances and pressures give rise to uncertainty and misgiving and tend to produce economic and social dislocations. They make difficult the enjoyment of treaty rights and the fulfillment of treaty obligations.

The views of the American Government with regard to such matters not alone in relation to China, but in relation to the whole world, are well known. As I have stated on many occasions, it seems to this Government most important in this period of world-wide political unrest and economic instability that governments and peoples keep faith in principles and pledges. In international relations there must be agreements and respect for agreements in order that there may be the confidence and stability and sense of security which are essential to orderly life and progress.

"This Government adheres to the provisions of the treaties to which it is a party and continues to bespeak respect by all nations for the provisions of treaties solemnly entered into for the purpose of facilitating and regulating, to reciprocal and common advantage, the contracts between and among the countries signatory."

The Nine-Power Treaty, to which Hull referred to without mentioning it by name, was signed in Washington in 1922. It is the chief instrument now governing American policy in the Far East. It was signed not only by the United States, Japan and Great Britain, but also by France, Belgium, Italy, The Netherlands, Portugal and China.

Although Japan was not mentioned by name in the body of the Secretary's statement, "Japanese activities" were mentioned in the foreword explaining that the statement was issued in reply to inquiries by press correspondents.

ican nationals, some American property, and substantial American commercial and cultural activities."

Hull added that it was the view of this Government "in this period of world-wide political unrest and economic instability" that it was most important "that governments and peoples keep faith in principles and pledges."

"In international relations," he said, "There must be agreements and respect for agreements in order that there may be the confidence and stability and sense of security which are essential to orderly life and progress.

'Drive Foe Out,' Ethiopia's King Orders Troops

Pitches War Tent in North to Direct Attack on Advancing Enemy.

By the United Press.

London (Friday), Dec. 6.—Orders to prepare to attack advancing Italian troops on the northern front and "drive them from the country" were flashed by Emperor Haile Selassie yesterday, the News Chronicle's correspondent at northern Ethiopian headquarters reported today.

The orders were transmitted to all Ethiopian forces now advancing toward the northern caravan center of Makale, occupied by Fascist legions, the correspondent said.

Emperor Haile Selassie reportedly reached this decision following a midnight telephone conference with his field generals and a lengthy council of war.

After the war council, the King of Kings pitched a red war tent at Dessye for the first time during the present compaign, the correspondent reported. This was a symbol that the offensive already has begun.

The government censor refuses to allow disclosure of when or where the first big battle will be fought, but when it comes, the Conquering Lion of Judah will be present, personally directing the activity of at least 600,000 troops, the dispatch said.

This dramatic decision to launch an offensive drive coincides with completion of Haile Selassie's mobilization plans, the correspondent reported.

Already picked Storm Troops are advancing toward Makale, while on either side of the village, surrounding the Italians by a wedge-shaped front line, the Ethiopians hold strategic positions in the mountainous region.

Paris Secretly Starts Building Huge Battleship

Lays Keel of 35,000-Ton Craft in Reply to Italy, Reich Challenge.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 5.—The naval ministry revealed today that the keel of a new 35,000-ton French battleship has been laid secretly at Brest.

The announcement was seen by naval experts as wiping out the possibility that an agreement might be reached at the London Naval Conference to reduce the displacement of capital ships to 25,000 tons, a proposal favored by Britain.

Construction has been under way for seven weeks, the ministry announced, in the same yard where the 26,500-ton battleship Dunkerque was launched October 2.

Parliament approved construction of the Dunkerque and the new ship, to be called the France, in an effort to meet the naval challenge of Germany and Italy.

Naval supremacy over the combined fleets of these two nations was expected to be the foundation of France's policy at the naval conference.

Since the World War, the German fleet has been about 100,000 tons, and Italy's 400,000 tons, while France has had about 700,000 tons.

Germany's recent agreement with Great Britain, however, permits the Reich to build to 420,000 tons, while Italy has more than 100,000 tons under construction. Thus the French viewpoint is that the fleet must be built to nearly 1,000,000 tons.

The armor plate and artillery for the France were understood to be already under construction, with those for the Dunkerque.

The new battleship will be 794 feet long, with a beam of 108 feet and a draft of 26½ feet.

The navy ministry said it probably would be completed in 1938.

Rail Unions Name Job Negotiators

200,000 Workers Affected by Proposed Merger.

By the United Press.

Heads of 21 powerful railroad labor unions last night moved to safeguard the jobs of 200,000 workers imperiled by forthcoming consolidations of many carriers.

The union leaders appointed a committee headed by George Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, to negotiate directly with the Association of American Railroads instead of through the office of Rail Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman.

This action, Harrison said, did not imply the rail workers had broken with the New Deal or were dissatisfied with the manner in which Eastman has administered the emergency rail act.

Men Are Declared Shopping Laggards

Men are much worse than women when it comes to last-minute Christmas shopping, the Merchants and Manufacturers Associatoin learned through a study of buying in a number of cities last December. As a result, the association yesterday advised Washington merchants to direct their appeals for earlier Christmas shopping almost exclusively to men.

"But the movement apparently has failed to penetrate the consciousness of most men," Shaw continued. "They still put off their necessary Christmas purchases until the last possible moment and then have much smaller stocks from which to make their selections. If the men of Washington would do their holiday shopping now they would find the stores in better shape to meet their needs than in the week before Christmas. By that time the salespeople are too rushed to give the attention they can give now."

Mussolini Cold To New Plans For War's End

the League oil embargo is believed certain. Authorities told the United Press tonight that if oil shipments to Italy ceased tomorrow, Italy possesses enough fuel for eight months' of war requirements.

The American Vacuum Oil Co., it is understood, has completed arrangements for construction of a modern oil refinery at Naples to cost 70,000,000 lire ($6,075,000). Decision to launch this costly enterprise at a moment when the League was considering oil sanctions was interpreted as showing Italian oil companies are not worried by the Geneva prospects.

The government spokesman's statement came like a dash of cold water to diplomats who believe peace negotiations had reached a more favorable stage than at any time since failure of the three-power conference in Paris last August.

The spokesman said the Paris conversations are "purely technical and unpolitical" and entirely without Italian participation.

"We know nothing about them and we have no communication on them. Therefore we see no foundation for optimism reported in the foreign press."

The government mouthpiece characterized withdrawal of several British battleships from the Mediterranean—announced last night—as "purely a technical measure without political significance."

Despite the discouraging external aspect of the situation, it was understood Count Charles de Chambrun, French Ambassador, was receiving important instructions from Paris tonight regarding the peace offer, which it was believed he would submit to Il Duce.

meeting which, informed observers agreed, was called to put the stamp of Anglo-French approval on a plan for peace negotiations, the British foreign secretary openly disavowed any desire to weaken the position of Il Duce or to destroy Fascism.

He made it clear Great Britain wanted France and Italy to be the best of friends.

"We have no wish to humiliate Italy nor to weaken Italy," he declared. "Indeed, we are most anxious to see a strong Italy in this world—an Italy that is strong morally, politically, socially and that is able to contribute to the world invaluable assistance.

"I appeal once again to Signor Mussolini and his fellow countrymen to dismiss entirely from their minds the suspicion that we have sinister motives behind our support of the League.

"We have none. • • •

"Let them dismiss from their minds the suspicion that we wish to drive a wedge between Italy and France. We wish to see Italy and France the firmest friends and we are glad we were able to help in the entente which brought Italy and France together at the beginning of this year."

Heated Session Seen.

Conceding the atmosphere "may be so heated" that the task of peacemaking may be an impossible one, Sir Samuel declared, nevertheless: "The French and we intend not only to go on trying but to redouble our efforts during the short period of the time still open before the Geneva meeting.

"The world urgently needs peace. We and the French, acting on behalf of the League and in the spirit of the League, are determined to make another great effort for peace."

Turning to the Far East, Sir Samuel said:

"I can only regard it as unfortunate that events should have taken place, whatever the actual truth of the matter may be, lend color to the belief that Japanese influence is exerted to shape Chinese internal political developments and administrative arrangements.

"Anything which tends to create this belief can only do harm to the prestige of Japan and hamper developments, which we all desire, for the friendliest mutual relations between Japan and her neighbors and friends."

Britain "Anxious."

He referred to the "so-called autonomy movement in north China" as a serious cloud on the Chinese horizon. This, together with reports of the activities of Japanese agents and recent movements of Japanese troops have caused Great Britain "considerable anxiety," Hoare added.

Sir Samuel denied that British oil concerns were exploiting the imminence of the oil embargo. He conceded there had been a large increase in oil exports to Italy, but said it did not come from British-controlled companies.

Defending the sanctions system, the foreign secretary said:

"There is not a nation taking part in the collective action of the League that would not be delighted to see friendly relations between themselves and Italy restored and sanctions ended.

"So long as collective action is needed the League of Nations, including ourselves, is bound to proceed under the Covenant, nor is there any likelihood that the League will weaken or the members fail to take their part.

"But one and all, we desire the occasion that calls for collective action to cease to exist. That is the reason why I make this appeal for peace."

The appeal, he continued, "is no sign of weakness. It is evidence solely of our desire to end as soon as possible a controversy that is embittering the world."

Obstacles in the way of peace may be formidable, Sir Samuel asserted, but the British government will not despair of surmounting them.

Stickley Named Firemen's Chief For Arlington

Volunteers Hold Election; Committee Choices Planned Later.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Arthur C. Stickley 2d was unanimously elected president of the Arlington Volunteer Fire Department last night in the firehouse.

Other officers are David Watson, vice president; Elmer J. Blackmer, jr., secretary and treasurer; Archie B. Hughes, assistant secretary; A. C. Scheffel, chief; William M. Clar, deputy chief; C. Preston Snoots, captain; Charles L. Snoots, lieutenant, and L. D. Donaldson, fire marshal.

Board members, in addition to the president and secretary-treasurer, are George F. Cook and Carl E. Scheffel. David Watson was elected representative vice president to the Arlington County Firemen's Association, with A. C. Sheffel as alternate.

Stickley stated he would announce committee appointments at the January meeting.

The tenth annual service sale card party will be given tonight in the Odd Fellows Hall at Clarendon under auspices of Arlington Unit, No. 139, American Legion Auxiliary, according to announcement by Mrs. H. W. Beattie and Mrs. Blanche Yorkdale, general chairman in charge of arrangements.

All prizes to be offered are made by disabled veterans of Virginia and money paid for each article goes to the veteran who made it. Prizes are now on display in the American Drug Store in Clarendon.

Committee members are Mrs. Lillian R. Edwards, Mrs. Joseph D. McDonnell, Mrs. May Delehanty, Mrs. Flora Cumberland, Mrs. DeLana Robertson, Miss Betty Sherwood and Miss Mignon Lunquest. The hostesses are Mrs. J. O. Frank, Mrs. Laura Maycock, Mrs. W. C. Welburn, Mrs. Caroline French, Mrs. DeLana Robertson and Mrs. Frank M. Sherwood.

A one-act play, "Love Is a Racket," will be presented by the junior class of Arlington Hall, Junior College for Girls, tomorrow night in the school auditorium.

The cast includes Elizabeth Williams, Marie Frack, Annabelle Hartley, Nancy Land, Harriette Wise, Adiel Bingman and Margaret Hill.

Fire officials urge homeowners to use more care in burning trash and firing furnaces, and to see that the flues are properly cleaned.

During the past few days many calls to chimney fires have been made which, firemen said, could have been avoided if more attention was paid to the flues.

The Mount Olivet Play Makers, of the Mount Olivet Methodist Church in Ballston, will present a religious play, "Let There Be Light," in the church school at 8 o'clock Sunday night. The play is under the direction of Mrs. J. M. Morgan.

The cast includes Bruce Card, Elizabeth Ball, J. M. Morgan, Charles Mackey, Saba McDorman, LeRoy Wilson, Jesse Robinson, Edna Robinson and Charles Strickler.

Mrs. Morgan announces the play will be repeated during the month in other churches in the county.

Judging of all projects carried on during the month will feature the meeting of Boy Scout Troop, 103, tonight in the James Monroe School auditorium in Aurora Heights. The judging will be done by Troop Committee Chairman Harry B. Bates.

Bank to Pay $18,000.

Smithsburg, Md., Dec. 5.—A 5 per cent distribution to depositors of the Peoples Banking Co. here, was announced by Edward C. Lease, representing the receiver, Warren F. Sterling. The money, amounting to $18,000, will be distributed December 19.

Laurel Post of Legion To Give Dance Tonight

A dance will be held tonight from 9 to 12 in the Laurel Armory, sponsored by Laurel Post No. 60, American Legion. Proceeds will be used to purchase equipment for the drum and bugle corps of the Sons of American Legion Squadron No. 60.

The committee in charge of the dance will be: Commander John F. Curtin, William McCormick, Julian B. Anderson, Thomas Murphy, James Copeland and James Turney. Music will be furnished by the Laurel Rythmonians.

H. A. Johnson, Union Veteran, Dies Here at 90

Doctor Had Been Ill Several Months; Served U. S. for 48 Years.

Dr. Henry A. Johnson, who wore the Union blue through the Civil War and who was a civilian employe in the War Department for 48 years, died yetserday in the Soldiers' Home Hospital.

Dr. Johnson was in his ninetieth year and had been ill for several months.

A number of years ago he received a degree in medicine from the medical college of Columbian University, now George Washington University. However, he never began the practice of medicine.

Before his retirement from the War Department in 1920, he had served in all civil grades from clerk to division chief. At one time he was in charge of regimental and company records of all former soldiers. He began his civilian Government service with the Census Bureau in 1870.

A native of Leonardtown, Md., he enlisted in the Twenty-sixth Pennsylvania Infantry at Philadelphia in May, 1861. He was seriously wounded in action at the second battle of Bull Run, August 29, 1862. He returned to active duty following his recovery and participated in engagements with the Third Army Corps and the Army of the Potomac.

He was with the military railway construction corps under Gen. Sherman and served as chief clerk of the military department of Alabama during the reconstruction.

For many years an active member of the G. A. R. in Washington, Dr. Johnson at various times held the positions of surgeon, vice commander and commander of the Sheridan Post, No. 6 He was past commander and past senior vice commander of the Department of Potomac, G. A. R.

Dr. Johnson was a past master of the George C. Whiting Lodge, F. A. A. M., past high priest of the Mount Pleasant Chapter of Royal Arch Masons and served as the first master of the Masonic Lodge at Herndon, Va.

Dr. Johnson also was active in the National Association of Retired Federal Employes, holding the office of first vice president and member of the executive committee.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Olive Johnson, and two stepdaughters, Mrs. Kate Hartman and Mrs. Garnett Leonard, both of New York City.

Mrs. Shaffer Elected President of Auxiliary

Long Discusses Virginia School Plan for Board

Expansion of Senior Work, Supplemental Smaller Institutions Mapped.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Alexandria 43-F-31.

Raymond V. Long, Virginia State school architect, of Richmond, explained the future State school program outlined by the State planning board, in an address yesterday to the Fairfax County School Board's monthly meeting.

Under the proposed program a number of small high schools having an enrollment of more than 250 pupils and offering a two-year high school course would be established in the various counties. Supplementing the small high school would be a large senior high school in a central location which would offer, in addition to the regular courses, vocational and commercial courses much in advance of the courses now being taught in the schools.

In addition, these senior high schools might be able to offer advanced courses similar to junior college work. This would afford graduates the opportunity to enter State colleges with an advanced standing.

He also told the board that a school map is being prepared by the State showing the location of the homes and the school population of each city, town or community. He declared that he believed in the future the school buildings would be located relative to the actual needs and that county lines would be disregarded.

A committee composed of former United States Senator Joseph L. Bristow, W. T. Carrico and Mason Hirst appeared before the board urging the immediate construction of four additional classrooms at the Annandale school. They cited the present overcrowding and the rapid growth of the community during the past two years. Members of the board told the committee that they were acquainted with the situation at the school and acknowledged the pressing need of additional classroom space, but stated that the board had no funds available for such a project.

A resolution was adopted changing the annual sick leave of teachers to five full days with pay instead of ten days at half pay. The change was made in accordance with the group insurance plan that has been adopted by the County Educational Association.

The appointment of an additional teacher in the commercial department of Fairfax High School and of a teacher at Herndon colored school was approved by the board. The board complained that too many books had been distributed to indigent pupils during the past term.

It was stated that the number greatly exceeded that of former years and a program was adopted making the principals of the schools responsible for investigating all requests for free text books.

A special meeting of the school board is planned within the next two weeks to confer with State Senator John W. Rust and Delegate John C. Mackall relative to a legislative program in reference to schools that might be presented to the State Legislature during the next session. Needed changes in local school laws will also be considered.

Oswald V. Carper was last night elected master of Great Falls Grange of Forestville. O. K. Miller was chosen overseer; Mrs. Mark Turner, lecturer; Claude Robey, steward; Mark Turner, jr., assistant steward; Charles F. Henderson, chaplain; D. D. Cornwell, treasurer; Miss Elizabeth Guilford, secretary; Lacey W. McCutcheon, gatekeeper.

The three graces were Mrs. W. C. Walker, for Ceres; Mrs. E. P. Orr, Pomona; Mrs. C. A. Pirkey, Flora. Miss Ruth Winston was selected lady assistant steward; Miss Annie Cornwell, pianist; Mrs. Rebecca Athey, flag bearer.

Mrs. William Winston, Mrs. Mark Turner and Mrs. Marvin Sanders were appointed to work with committees from the Parent-Teacher Association and Home Demonstration Club in supplying Christmas baskets for needy families and serving hot soup to school children during the winter. E. P. Orr and Mrs. Leslie Lanham were appointed to represent Great Falls Grange on the county committee for the recreational reserve. Plans were made for a Christmas party December 18 in charge of Mrs. A. C. Speight.

Miss Annie Cornwell, Miss Elizabeth Guilford and Miss Ruth Smith will present a tableau and furnish vocal selections tonight at the county Grange gathering at Woodlawn.

Great Falls went on record as approving the effort being made by the Virginia State Grange to extend to Virginia the benefits of the fire and automobile insurance now being sponsored by the National Grange.

Mrs. O. K. Miller Tuesday was elected president of the Forestville Home Demonstration Club. Mrs. Leslie Lanham was re-elected secretary, and Mrs. E. P. Orr, treasurer. Mrs. Dorothy Robey, Mrs. F. W. Hicks and Mrs. Mark Turner were chosen leaders. Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Orr and Mrs. Hicks were named the club committee on Christmas baskets and soup.

Mrs. Katherine Garner Davis was elected president of the night branch guild of the Falls Church. Mrs. P. B. Richardson was chosen vice president; Mrs. E. B. Stiff, secretary, and Mrs. William Clayton Pryor, treasurer.

Large Numbers Pay State Taxes In Alexandria

Treasurer's Office Kept Open to Handle Rush; Budget Considered.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 623.

The final rush for the payment of State taxes, including the capitation tax, closed at 10 o'clock last night. The office of City Treasurer Roger C. Sullivan was kept open to accommodate those who could not call during the regular business hours. An unusually large number of persons paid their capitation taxes, so as to be eligible to vote in the Democratic primary in April, when six members of the city council will be nominated.

No announcements have been made as yet by any of the councilmen as to whether they will run for re-election. It has been intimated, however, that several will have opposition.

The councilmen whose terms will expire on September 1 next are First Ward, John D. Matter; Second, Judge Louis C. Barley; Third, Percy E. Clift; Fourth, George K. Bender; Fifth, Henry O'B. Cooper; Sixth, Charles L. Burgess. Their terms are for two years, while those of the three councilmen-at-large—Mayor Emmett C. Davison, A. Slater Lamond and Dr. John T. Ashton—are for three years. The candidate-at-large in the general election receiving the largest number of votes becomes Mayor or president of the council.

The council met last night in a special session to consider the tentative budget, submitted last Saturday by City Manager E. C. Dunn. Several meetings will probably be held before the budget is in shape to present at a public hearing, as required by law. The tentative budget, as presented, provides for a 10-cent increase in real estate tax rate, from $2.50 to $2.60, and a reduction of 20 cents in personal property rate, from $2.80 to $2.60. Mayor Davison, however, believes that the present rates will yield sufficient revenue, and that no increase will be necessary.

The historic trowel, property of Alexandria-Washington Lodge of Masons, which was used by George Washington in laying the cornerstone of the Capitol Building in Washington, and was later used at the Washington Monument, and at many of the public buildings in Washington and throughout the country, will be taken to Richmond tomorrow and used in laying the cornerstone of the Barrett Memorial Hospital, now under construction at the Masonic Home there. A committee from Alexandria-Washington Lodge, headed by Clyde C. Lamond, jr., worshipful master, will carry the trowel to Richmond and the ceremonies will be conducted by the Grand Lodge of Virginia, under the direction of the Rev. Thomas W. Hooper, grand master of Masons in Virginia.

Dr. William Mosely Brown, past grand master, of Clarendon, will be the principal speaker.

The new hospital is the gift of Dr. Robert South Barrett and Mrs. Barrett, in memory of their son, Robert South Barrett, jr. Dr. Barrett is a past master of Alexandria-Washington Lodge.

The annual charity dance of the Alexandria Lions Club will be held tonight in the Lee Room of the George Mason Hotel, with Louis E. DeMoll as general chairman. He is assisted by Thornton Goods, Cary Blackwell, Stafford Kelley, Dr. Nathan Shuman and Edwin Burchell. Proceeds will go to the Lions fund for aiding local children suffering from defective eyesight.

Martin E. Greene, business manager of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce and chairman of the annual Red Cross roll call, is urging all Alexandrians who have not taken out membership in this organization to call at the Chamber of Commerce headquarters, northeast corner King and Alfred streets, and subscribe.

U. S. Lump Sum Called Unfair On Tax Basis

Hazen Says Federal Holdings Make Up 25 Per Cent of D. C. Property.

Measured on the basis of assessed value, Federal property in the District comprises 25 to 30 per cent of all taxable property in the National Capital, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said yesterday.

Federal property is to be the basis of a computation now being made by the Commissioner to determine what is a reasonable Federal appropriation for maintenance and development of the National Capital.

"It is unreasonable," he said, "to expect 75 per cent of the property to bear the expense of developing the greatest and most beautiful capital in the entire world.

"I'm willing that District taxpayers pay as much taxes as are paid in other reasonably well-governed cities. Our substantial residents are not trying to duck taxes. But the present arrangement simply is unreasonable."

Thirty-five per cent of the Government property in the District is in the streets, Mr. Hazen said. This compares with about 20 per cent in other cities. He pointed to the excessive amount of parks in the District in comparison with other cities of comparative size. The parks were highly desirable and beneficial, he agreed, but insisted the full burden of the cost of making a world-beautiful capital city should not be shifted by Congress to the shoulders of voteless District residents.

His formula also is to give consideration to proportioning police, fire, water and other municipal activities among Federal and other property. He expects to have his study completed next week. Then he is to confer with the special municipal tax committee. Conferences with business and civic leaders are to follow and public hearings are to be called soon after December 15 to consider a future fiscal program, Mr. Hazen said.

Better Trained Teachers In Virginia Forecast

Richmond, Dec. 5 (AP).—Better trained teachers with fewer pupils each in the Virginia public school system within the next five years was predicted here by Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction.

Within that time, he estimated, it will be possible to reduce the students per teacher from the present 25 in the rural and 40 in urban areas to about 20 and 35 respectively. With the reduction will go increasingly higher standards of teacher requirements through a strengthening of teacher college work.

Bank Robbery Suspects Are Seized in Chicago

Chicago, Dec. 5 (AP).—At the point of a submachine gun, two men suspected of participating in the $25,000 robbery of a Nebo (Ky.) bank were arrested here late today by Detective Lieut. Archie Kane. The men were Harry S. Peters, 30, Pittsburgh, and Ralph Chamness, 34, Evansville, Ind.

Lieut. Kane said they also were suspected of having participated in several other robberies and safe blowings in Kentucky and southern Indiana.

Taylor Reported Retiring, Fight for Leadership Held Posible.

tration measures, and responding to partisan assaults.

The plan was evolved as a wholesale caucus scramble for the leadership appeared imminent, influenced by rumors that Bankhead would not return and Taylor would retire as acting leader. Despite efforts to work out a plan for harmonious leadership action, the caucus fight still is a possibility.

It was learned from one high in House councils that Bankhead, who never has functioned actively as leader because of illness, has been advised by his physician that he can return to his duties only on condition he does not unduly exert himself. He still is convalescent.

Under the regime laid out for him he would appear at the Capitol each morning for an hour or so of conferences, after which he would go to the floor to noon for the formal opening of each session. He would not stay on the floor through the day's session, or necessarily be there for the day's windup. He has been advised under no circumstances to engage in any pitched floor battle.

The more active roles, on the floor and off, would be assigned to the sub-leader if the present unprecedented plan for House government is consummated.

Despite White House demands for a short session, the legislative agenda now shaping up is one that will require the efforts of all of those expected to be drafted in the junta movement if the program is to be handled to the satisfaction of the Administration, it was said.

Aside from the regular business of appropriations, the controverted cash bonus question and the riddle of relief, leaders are expressing real concern at the trend of the Townsend $200-a-month old-age pension sentiment throughout the country. It will require leadership skill of a high order to sidetrack it from a vote at this session.

Heavy Townsend pressure is being applied from back home. There is a steady bombardment of Townsend petitions, and some members in influential posts already are hedging on the items. One leader has received a petition signed by 25,000 constituents, a figure larger than the total number of votes he polled last election.

The bloc-leadership of House action is entirely contingent on Bankhead returning to his post, but there was said to be no doubt last night that he intends to attempt a comeback. During the period of his convalescence, he has never shown any disposition to resign. A caucus to displace him has never been suggested.

Father Used as Human Target At Roosevelt Assault Hearing

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 5.—The father of one of two college students held for the grand jury on a charge of assault with dangerous weapons, dramatically served as a human target in a hushed courtroom today.

A police arms expert, Sergt. Edward J. Seibolt, had testified air pistols admittedly used by Cornelius van Schaack Roosevelt, 20-year-old grandson of former President Roosevelt, and Peter de Florez, 21, his roommate, might kill a person within a 50-foot range.

Striding to the witness stand, Louis de Florez, New York engineer and graduate of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where his son and Roosevelt are studying, told Seibolt, "Shoot."

He pulled open his coat. The officer fired at his chest.

De Florez, without wincing picked up the lead pellet off the floor and handed it to Judge Robert Walcott.

Before that he permitted Seibolt to shoot at his hand, protected by a handkerchief. He was only three paces from the policeman when the shots were fired.

He also fired a pellet into his handkerchief-covered hand in an attempt to disprove police contentions the gun was "dangerous at a 150-foot range."

Seibolt had declared he believed a pellet "fired at close range would penetrate the wall of a person's stomach."

Young Roosevelt, son of Col. Roosevelt, former Governor General of the Philippines, and De Florez, of Pomfret, Conn., "peppered" motorists and pedestrians passing Technology's Six Club on three occasions, Patrolman Hugh J. O'Neill testified.

Redmond Goes To Court; Case Is Called Off

Girl Attack Suspect Waives Hearing; Loring Murder Probers Present.

With 12 police officers standing by to ward off possible violence, the preliminary hearing of Victor Redmond in Mount Rainier, Md., town hall last night was called off suddenly when Redmond's counsel waived proceedings.

Police Lieut. Joseph Itzel and Detective Sergt. Leo Vogelsang, of Baltimore, who attended the session in the hope of getting some information of assistance in solving the murder of Corinna Loring, were left without a single new development.

Redmond, 42-year-old Georgia avenue restaurant employe, facing a charge of attempted criminal assault on a 9-year-old girl, was hurried back to the Upper Marlboro Jail, where he will stay until the grand jury convenes in April.

Extensive police preparations had been made for the hearing. Rumors that townspeople might stir up trouble had led to the summoning of Sheriff Guy Bell, Chief Deputy Sheriff William Clifton, Deputies Guy Bell, jr., and Vinton Nichols, Sergt. Ralph Brown and Pvt. Oscar Beall, of the Prince Georges County police, and Police Chief Eugene Plumer and Pvts. George Giddons, Vernon L. Evans and Richard Kerns, of Mount Rainier.

The crowd in the cold, bare room was surprisingly small, only 30 persons, including the police. The relieved officers theorized that most persons thought the hearing was to have been at 8 p. m. instead of 7 p. m. The 9-year-old girl complainant and several small friends were present.

Redmond's counsel, Albert R. Hassell, said the defendant would waive hearing and bond. Justice of the Peace Gilbert W. Hughes granted the request. State's Attorney Alan Bowie did not object, and the proceedings were over.

Skeleton Discovered Believed Blue Soldier

A human skeleton, believed to be that of a Civil War soldier, has been discovered by CCC workers in Petersburg National Military Park, Virginia.

Fragments of a uniform partially identified the soldier as a member of the Union forces. The bones were unearthed near what was formerly Fort Fisher.

Buried less than 2 feet beneath the ground, the body was found during tree-planting projects on the military reservation.

Historians of the National Park Service are investigating. The body will be reinterred in Poplar Grove National Cemetery.

Three Found Dead In Burning Home

By the Associated Press.

Wakonda, S. Dak., Dec. 5.—The finding of the charred bodies of three persons in a burning farmhouse early today led Sheriff William Russell to investigate a theory they had been shot to death before the blaze started.

The victims were Nels Chris Jacobsen, 60; his wife, 59, and son, Walter, 21. Neighbors found the bodies.

Sheriff Russell, called to investigate, found the Jacobsen dog dead, lying near a corn crib. Four empty shotgun shells were near the house. Apparently there was no gun in the ruins of the building, leveled by the flames.

The Jacobsen family was known to have been wealthy and a theory was advanced that a burglar killed the three occupants, later firing the building in an attempt to cover up the crime.

'Kidnap Victim' Ady Discovered After 3 Months

Millionaire Mine Owner Refuses to Answer Officers' Questions.

By the Associated Press.

Alamogordo, N. Mex., Dec. 5.—Joseph W. Ady, 54, erstwhile millionaire mining man of Colorado Springs, Colo., missing for three months and feared to have been kidnaped, came to town today from his mountain - cloistered copper mine where officers found him.

Sheriff Howard Beachman, armed with a detainer for the man, returned from the mine 30 miles northeast of here about the same time, but refused to say whether Ady came back in custody or of his own accord.

While Federal agents at Denver studied reported abduction notes, received by Mrs. Ady, demanding ransom, two officers found Ady yesterday at the mine, which he owns.

"I have done nothing wrong in Colorado," Ady was quoted as saying by one of the officers, Deputy Sheriff George Allen.

"I will not submit to questioning."

Allen and R. G. Colvin, Department of Justice investigator, left Ady at the mine, saying he refused to accompany them to Alamogordo.

At Washington, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation, said his men desired to learn if Ady was kidnaped.

Officers toyed with the theory that would-be extortionists might have used the knowledge of Ady's disappearance to extract money from his wife.

Chief Harper issued the detainer warrant, explaining that Ady is wanted for questioning in connection with possible charges against the unknown writer of the kidnaping notes.

The New Week's Film Bills Begin to Disclose Themselves on Current Screens

Great Picture Opens at Met For Local Run

Arnold, Lorre Triumph; Arliss in Second Week; Theater Chat.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"CRIME AND PUNISHMENT," Columbia Pictures' filmization of the novel by Fyodor Dostoievski, adapted to the screen by S. K. Lauren and Joseph Anthony, co-starring Edward Arnold and Peter Lorre, with Marian Marsh, Elisabeth Risdon, Tala Birell, Robert Allen, Gene Lockhart, Douglas Dumbrille, Charles Waldron, Thurston Hall, Johnny Arthur and Mrs. Pat Campbell. Directed by Josef von Sternberg. Previewed Tuesday afternoon, December 3. Now showing at the Metropolitan Theater.

It is a grim and relentless story that is visualized in "Crime and Punishment."

The grisly recital of the lacerating punishment conscience is able to inflict upon a human being probably never has been more vividly portrayed than in this screen version of a monumental work of fiction.

Confined to no fixed period, no definite locale and no specific group of persons, this masterpiece of psychological drama is as universal as the common impulses, moods and emotions of the human race.

The overpoweringly dominant character in the movement of the play's compelling developments is Kaskolnikov, the graduate, cum laude, of the university that sends him forth into the world one of its honored representatives of cultural achievement.

We meet him first on graduation day and see him then dwindle into obscurity, insignificance and penury. He starves in a garret while a leading literary magazine anonymously publishes his masterful treatises upon criminology. Forced to the extremity of pawning an heirloom, he meets Sonya, a Magdalen of the pavements, in similarly desperate straits, and the "black beetle" pawnbroker—a ravenous crone eking out a fortune from the desperation of her "clients."

Conceives a Happy Murder!

Goaded to the last extremities of endurance by the spectacle of his sister's surrender to the obnoxious attentions of a smug "aristocrat," stung by the plight of the girl he has met on the stairs of the rickety tenement in which the lady Shylock conducts her sordid establishment and vexed by his own inability to cope with an economic order balanced neither by justice nor equitable opportunity, the impulse to murder takes form in his mind.

It is here that the true dimensions of the drama begin to assert themselves.

Kaskolnikov, the murderer, having once bested the Inspector of Police at his own game, acquires a bravado that eventually is his undoing.

In applying the sublime theories of his advanced notions of what makes and unmakes criminals, he betrays himself on every hand.

Every profound pronouncement becomes an indictment of his own status in the case of the murdered pawnbroker. About himself he weaves a complete net of evidence of guilt, prompted only by the penetrating suggestions of the Inspector of Police, who assumes a complete faith in his innocence.

Sonya, by the very impetuousity of a love that eventually is the redeeming influence in the life of the transgressor, adds to the sum total of evidence against the man whose mentality made him the ostensible perpetrator of the "perfect crime." The final moment of the drama has the fine taste to be prophetic rather than conclusive.

Peter Lorre Triumphs.

To this admirable condensation of a prodigious literary work Peter Lorre, Edward Arnold and Marian Marsh contribute the most impressive and most important characterizations.

Too much can not be said for the stolidly imposing character study contributed to the play by Lorre. In every physical contour, every intonation and every subtle nuance, he is Kaskolnikov, hounded less by the law than by his own inescapable sense of guilt. Mr. Lorre, in this assignment, may be said to transcend the usual limitations of "acting" and to assume the living lineaments of Dostoievski's hapless hero.

Edward Arnold, as Inspector Porfiry, has a less exacting task, but one which is no less skillfully executed. Like the cat that plays with a mouse, he bides his time cuffing his victim gently this way and that, waiting for the surrender that he knows to be inevitable. He is the conquering figure in a situation of infinite pathos and, therefore, the one who rates second place in the sympathy of those who merely observe the course of inexorable events from the safety of the sidelines.

Marian Marsh, in the role of Sonya, fails to realize the full possibilities of the opportunity that is spread before her and so falls short of attaining the full measure of its value. She is, nevertheless, an engaging figure in the progress of the narrative, whose efforts hold more promise than any she heretofore has exerted before the cameras.

Among the supporting players it is impossible to choose one to stand out above the rest. Elizabeth Risdon, remembered as one of the earliest to assume the overwhelming feminine role of prime feminine importance in O'Neill's "Strange Interlude," is a moving figure as the mother, and Tala Birell is equally effective as the sister, Antonia, whose future acts so strongly as a motivating influence in the twisted thinking of her brother. Gene Lockhart, in the most thankless part in the picture, and Mrs. Patrick Campbell as the ill-fated "black beetle" of pledges, add greatly to the strength of an ensemble that betrays no point of serious weakness.

This column already has paid tribute to the extraordinary artistry revealed in his direction of this subject by Josef von Sternberg. In his use of light and shade as a living element in the expression of dramatic intent, Von Sternberg have has achieved a masterful effect. The dramatic climaxes are enhanced, also, by a judicious musical treatment.

The settings and backgrounds are highly appropriate to the rounded perfection of the film's aggregate excellence in their simplicity and fine consonance with the content, cadence and conviction of a celluloid transcription of fiction that must rank with the cinema's most distinguished achievements.

Belasco

"MR. HOBO." Gaumont-British picturization of a story by Paul Lafitte, adapted to the screen by Maud Howell and Guy Bolton, starring George Arliss, with Gene Gerrard, Frank Cellier, Patrick Knowles, Viola Keats, Henrietta Watson and Mary Clare. Directed by Milton Rosmer. Second week.

Departing from the habitually dignified character of his roles as practically all of the famous political and financial figures in the recent history of the world—Disreali, Alexander Hamilton, Voltaire, Rothschild, the Duke of Wellington, etc., etc., George Arliss, of a sudden, has embraced the sort of thing that he has, on one or two previous occasions, done for the American cinema.

Under the banner of Gaumont-British this distinguished actor has consented to become a tramp, for the time being, and to make one of his most substantial hits in the role of "Mr. Hobo."

A few, including the present writer, probably will not accept Mr. Arliss as the ideal exponent of this sort of characterization, but the fact remains that he makes of the indigent Mr. Rothschild, "Mr. Hobo," a personage of infinite appeal. From the role of vagabond he becomes, almost in the twinkling of an eye, a banker of parts!

What he does in that capacity affords most of the fun and all of the drama of a picture that deserves the second week it has won on the Belasco screen.

Carried over with the major feature are the first-week subsidiaries, with the exception of Pathe News, which is not dropped, but offered in a new issue.

Altogether this is a bill that merits the flattering attendance it has been accorded since its opening on Lafayette Square the day before Thanksgiving.

What with the Messrs. Karl Schriftgiesser, The Post-Impressionist, Ray C. B. Brown, Bill McCormick, Shirley Povich and a few of the rest of us from The Post on hand yistiddy afternoon to pay tribute to the presence in the National Capital of that eminent Broadway commentator, Ed Sullivan, and he isn't such a common 'tator as you might think, you would imagine that something or other about the lad might by chance creep into the paper. But this morning's paper is what we call "tight," which, after Mr. Sullivan's party in the Carlton yistiddy afternoon, under the liquid auspices of Divisional Manager Carter Barron of Loew's, Inc., seems highly appropriate.

Ed Sullivan, as you may have heard, is appearing in the top-line spot on the stage at Loew's Fox Theater, beginning today.

With all of the rest of the boys on the paper with columns and columns at their disposal doing the honors yesterday in a literary way, it was my intention to pick the fellow up later on from the purely theatrical point of view. It still is.

All of those other stories will find their way into the paper as space permits, but in the meantime I beg to offer the suggestion that Ed Sullivan is a swell person. You may or may not like his "Broadway" column, but you can't help liking Ed.

So when I go up to New York to see Billy Rose's "Jumbo," Ed and I are going out for a round of the night spots. He will write his present-day "Broadway" and I will write my comparison of it with the first Broadway I ever knew—which dates back so far that I have no present or future intention of admitting when it was.

It ought to make a good joint column, at that. And I don't necessarily mean "joint," the way you do.

Well, good luck to youse guys on The Post. Try to get going sometime, laymen, as Victor Moore says in "Anything Goes."

And you will be missing a bet if you overlook Ed's revue at the Fox this week—or so I hear. More about that after I've seen it this afternoon.

Identification-Card Note.

McCallum certainly manufactures fine "socks."

Ask anybody there yesterday!

Is Important in Stellar Cast

With Peter Lorre and Edward Arnold cast in the co-stellar roles of Columbia's picturization of Dostoievski's "Crime and Punishment," there are still enough impressive parts left to engage the loftiest talents of a long list of players. Among the foremost of these is Tala Birell, pictured above, who is seen in the role of Antonia, sister of Kaskolnikov and one of the innocent instigators of his transgression of the law. "Crime and Punishment" opened with a special premiere presentation in the Metropolitan Theater last night.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywords and Paragraphs.

Hollywood, Dec. 5.

"THE TALE OF TWO CITIES" is a great flicker, as evidenced at the preview. It recalls an incident concerning Charles Dickens when he was writing the novel.

Dickens was worried about those pages dealing with the French Revolution itself. He wanted his material to be exciting, yet authentic. Dickens asked Carlyle, who had written a classic on the French Revolution, for some suggestions. Carlyle said he would be glad to be of assistance. The next day a cart loaded with books arrived in front of Dickens' house. On the cart was a sign reading: "This will give you a start."

Ben Hecht is now in Hollywood. He arrived on Sunday, and it took him practically all the day to locate Charlie MacArthur. It seems that they couldn't meet at the same parties.

• • • •

While Hecht was searching, he had dinner at the Brown Derby with Gene Fowler. They were having an interesting conversation when a prominent actor sat down in the booth with them. This annoyed Hecht. The actor called over his daughter and proudly said to Hecht: "I'd like you to meet my daughter." Ben greeted her and then said: "You're 29 years old, aren't you?" The girl and the actor were shocked. "Oh, no," said the actor, "she's only 17." Hecht leaned over, patted the gal and said: "Little girl, you have had a great sorrow."

CHICO MARX tells of an adventure he had while driving in his car along Wilshire boulevard. When he stopped for a traffic signal at a certain block, he was approached by a man who asked for a lift. Chico told him to get in. They're driving a little way and the man says: "This is a nice car you've got." Chico answers: "Yes," and continues driving. The man says: "I was in the Army." "Yes," answers Chico. "And I believe I could get a job in Glendale as a plumber's assistant if I could get to Glendale. Will you give me 50 cents for this vest? The money will get me to Glendale." Chico answers: "I don't want the vest, but if 50 cents will get you a job, here it is." He gives the man the money. The man thanks him, and a few blocks later gets out of the car to take a bus to Glendale.

A few days later, Chico driving along Wilshire boulevard and at the same street he is approached for a lift. He notices that it is the same man. Chico motions for him to get into the car.

• • • •

Chico hides his face from the man and they drive along. Soon the man says: "This is a nice car you've got." Chico nods. Then the man say: "I was in the army." Chico nods. The man continues: "I believe I could get a job in Glendale as a plumber's assistant if I could get to Glendale. Will you give me 50 cents for this vest?" Chico answers: "I won't give you 50 cents for the vest, but I'll give you 50 cents for your coat." The man is startled. "But I need the coat for the job. Why won't you give me 50 cents for the vest?" "Because I paid for and own the vest already," says Chico, turning around.

The man promised not to bother Chico again after he gave him another 50 cents.

A CERTAIN supervisor, who is in charge of making a comedy with a noted comedian at a big studio, looked at the rushes and was very much pleased with the work. He wished to compliment the director, and turning to him, said: "This is the funniest picture I ever saw. The comedy is unsuperb."

The Countess di Frasso is getting ready to toss another unusual Hollywood party. This is to be a "physical culture party," so you can picture the costumes. The countess intends renting the Rollerdrome and redecorating it as a gymnasium.

One of the many amusing yarns told about Wilson Mizner in Edward D. Sulivan's book, "The Fabulous Wilson Mizner," concerns the occasion when Mizner was discussing a picture with a movie mogul. The name of a director was suggested.

• • • •

Mizner remarked that he believed the director was a little old-fashioned in his methods. As he continued to talk, Mizner noticed that the producer made a note in a small book and put it into his pocket. Later, Mizner asked him just what it was he had wished to remember.

"About the director," said the producer. "I want to ask him not to be old-fashioned any more."

The other night John Barrymore spoke over the long-distance phone to Elaine Barrie.

'Public Service' Youth Program Is Urged Here

Mrs. Meyer Offers Plan to Offset Militarism of Foreign Nations.

A plan to mobilize the Nation's youth for public service as an antidote to the militaristic youth programs of foreign nations caused wide interest and discussion yesterday among members of the Twentieth Century Club meeting at the Washington Hotel.

The plan was proposed by Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the publisher of The Washington Post, who addressed the club on "Education for Democracy."

Charging that this Nation was coddling and weakening its young people by the overprotective attitude of parents and by "an administration dole called the Youth Fund," Mrs. Meyer urged governmental action toward developing moral discipline and a sense of responsibility toward the State.

"I propose that we achieve this," she said, "by seeking through act of Congress that each boy or girl before he or she can vote, give one year of public service to the country. Let them do it between 18 and 20, according to convenience, and let them choose, among the many things to be learned, that for which they have the most aptitude."

Tasks for Girls.

The work should be practical, including manual labor for boys and girls alike, and only enough theory to help them understand the relationship of their efforts to the Government as a whole. The plan would be organized in local units, because its chief object would be to relate the individual closely to his environment, and only those youths need leave home who choose services such as might be involved in large State or national efforts.

"Girls would find the most useful tasks in social service work, old-age pension management, hospital or other welfare and educational programs. Political organization and functions should also be studied. Poor and rich should serve side by side. Class consciousness would be eliminated as never before in this country. There should be no exemptions for any reason except the poorest health.

"In short, we should at last make an experiment in genuine democracy, a thing we have never dared to do."

"Only such enterprises would be undertaken as would otherwise be left undone. The labor unions would have nothing to fear from this program. Indeed, it is not difficult to see ways in which they could co-operate in their own as well as in the general social interest. The social service work in this country, for example, has always been undermanned and inadequately carried out.

Youth Fund Criticised.

"What could we not accomplish with all that extra help? What could our youngsters not learn? Many of them, I am sure, would remain in public service, not in hope of a safe living, but because it would be an honorable distinction to serve the local community, the State, or Nation."

Mrs. Meyer criticised the present Youth Fund as a measure tending to weaken, rather than strengthen, young people.

"The most unfortunate thing is the idea which has of late been instilled in the minds of American citizens that the Government owes them a living," she said. "It will take the Nation a long time to get over the 'come and get it' psychology inculcated not only in the unemployed but in every minority group that tends to raid the Treasury.

"No better illustration of the irresponsible waste of resources and of conscienceless procedure can be found than the administration of what is called the Youth Fund. With millions of our young people in need of strong moral guidance and in many cases of actual protection, nothing more constructive has been devised than to scatter an outright dole here and there in a haphazard way.

"In the meantime, a large staff of employes in Washington and throughout the States has been eating up the $50,000,000 for several months. The cash for the youngsters is only just beginning to come through, though in how many places is not reported. This betrayal of youth is the most shocking example which could be given our young folks of the mental and moral bankruptcy of their elders. It would have been better to do nothing than to admit this paucity of educational ideas."

Following Mrs. Meyer's address, many questions were asked about the practical carrying out of the "moral conscription plan" for youth. About 200 women attended the meeting, which was the regular monthly session of the club.

Silver Spring Proposal Seeks Improving of Police Methods

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST,
1111 Oak Avenue, Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone, Shepherd 2363.

An investigation of Montgomery County law enforcement agencies to determine how police methods in the county may be modernized was asked in a resolution adopted by the Silver Spring Citizens Association meeting last night in the Silver Spring Liquor Control Board Building.

The resolution proposed that the investigation be conducted by the Montgomery County Civic Federation, central body of all county citizens groups. It called attention to the failure of law enforcement methods in the county to keep pace with the area's metropolitan development.

A study should be made of the office and duties of the State's attorney and the county police, the resolution directed, "with special emphasis on the need of added police officers, equipment and schooling of police, the creation of a crime detection force, the need for a coroner or medical examiner and the need for professional assistance in the office of the State's attorney."

The association also asked the federation to draft legislation "conducive to the most efficient operation of the law enforcement agencies of the county government."

Approval by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission of plans for a playground development in the rear of the National Guard Armory was reported to the association by E. M. Barry, chairman of a special committee for the project.

Barry said the commission is ready to go ahead with plans for the development, provided necessary funds are authorized by County Commissioner Paul M. Coughlan.

The association also voted to notify the county commissioners of its opposition to the present commercial classification for property adjacent to the Montgomery-Blair High School.

Mrs. Frederick A. Johnston was elected chairman of the Takoma branch of the American Red Cross to succeed Mrs. C. R. Mills at a meeting of the executive board yesterday at the Takoma branch of the Public Library.

Other officers were re-elected. They are Mrs. Albert Scott, vice chairman; Mrs. W. A. Walker, secretary; Miss S. M. McNeill, treasurer. Mrs. B. A. Chandler and Mrs. C. R. Mills were elected directors. The "gray ladies," including Mrs. George M. Pryor, Mrs. Samuel Scrivener, Mrs. Royal Sherburne and Mrs. Charles F. Ferry, plan to do some special work for the veterans at Walter Reed Hospital for Christmas.

The roll call report showed the amount collected this year was $407.45.

Feline beauty will be on display today at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School at the cat show of the Pine Tree Staff, editors of the school yearbook. The show will be held at the school and proceeds from the admission fees will be used to pay for placing the picture of the winning cat in the year book.

Four classes will be shown: Alley cats, pedigreed cats, freak cats and kittens. Three ribbons will be awarded in each class. The champion cat of the show will receive a ribbon and the honor of being portrayed in the year book.

Albert A. Ady, assistant county farm agent; Jack Allen, of the Washington Star, and Philip J. Austensen, of The Washington Post, will be judges.

Mrs. Townley E. Gamble has been elected president of the newly organized Young Women's Democratic Club of Silver Spring, Md. Other officers elected are Miss Anne Snure, Wheaton, vice president; Miss Marie Buscher, Four Corners, recording secretary; Miss Dorothy Cutler, Silver Spring, corresponding secretary; Miss Eleanor Cissel, Colesville, treasurer, and Miss Kathryn Cutler, of Silver Spring, sergeant at arms. Meetings will be held alternate Monday nights in Jesup Blair Community House and membership will be restricted to Democratic women between 20 and 35. The territory embraced by the club includes the Thirteenth Election District with the exception of Takoma Park.

The Blackface Orioles, a group of students from the Montgomery Blair Senior High School, Silver Spring, Md., will present a minstrel show tonight and tomorrow night at 8:15 o'clock in the auditorium of the Takoma-Silver Spring High School. Proceeds of the show will go to the Silverlogue—school year book. James Littlefield will be interlocutor and end men are James Van Devanter, Staten Alden, Charles Smith, James Henderson, Richard Barton, Millard Reynolds, Bruce Davis and Richard Chapin.

The Ladies Guild of the Chapel of the Reedemer, Glen Echo, will hold its annual rummage sale at the parish hall today and tomorrow from 11 a. m. to 9 p. m.

"Henshaw's Harem," a two-act comedy, will be presented tonight at 8 o'clock at Trinity Parish Hall, Piney Branch road and Dahlia street, by Trinity Young People's Society. Appearing in the cast will be Miss Ann Evans, Lemuel Fraser, Mrs. Robert Frederick Freund, Miss Luella Lackman, Miss Elinor Fraser, John Waterfield, John Hildebrand and the dance pupils of Ivy Randall. Proceeds will go to the new church building fund.

250,000 Extra Store Employes Hired for Yule

Chicago Estimates Public Has 5 Billion More Than Last Year.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 5.—The Nation's merchants have hired more than 250,000 extra employes for the Christmas season, the Chicago Association of Commerce estimated today.

They will help in handling more than $1,000,000,000 in new stock the organization calculated the retailers of the country have laid in for the Christmas trade.

The prospectus pointed to an unusually early start in Yuletide buying as an augury of brisk holiday business.

It figured the American public went to town this year with $5,000,000,000 more in its pockets than in 1934 and that the public would probably expend more than $30,000,000,000 in retail establishments in 1935.

The association's figures were based on reports to the Interstate Merchants Council, having membership in 38 States and five Canadian provinces.

Board Seeks Increase In Health Service Funds

Vast improvements in the health of the American people in return for a comparatively small increase in the appropriation for the Public Health Service were forecast yesterday by the Science Advisory Board.

Reporting to President Roosevelt on a study of the service, three of the country's leading medical authorities acting as a committee of the board recommended that $2,000,000 be added to the service's present annual appropriation of $10,000,000, much of which cannot be expended on basic research.

The committee is composed of Dr. M. J. Rosenau, of the Harvard Medical School; Dr. Thomas Parran, jr., New York State Commissioner of Health, and Dr. Simon Flexner, former director of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research.

50 Candles on
THE CONGRESSIONAL'S CAKE

An anniversary of real significance is celebrated when The Congressional starts out for New York on its regular run December 7 this year. For with this trip The Congressional rounds out half-a-century of distinguished public service between America's greatest metropolis and the Nation's Capital.

Quite a different train . . . the sleek mile-a-minute electrified flyer of today . . . from that which made its inaugural run in 1885. Then it made the 226-mile run in five hours and thirty-five minutes. Today it clips off this distance in 225 minutes!

In its brilliant career probably no train has enjoyed so distinguished a clientele as The Congressional. World and national leaders in all fields have made it their train. In the span of 50 years it has made 18,000 round trips . . . carried 7,000,000 passengers.

In consideration of its years of distinguished service it had the signal honor of being the first train to be electrically operated between Washington and New York on the successful completion of this great project.

On its 50th Anniversary the Pennsylvania Railroad rededicates its distinguished flyer to the public service . . . a train of outstanding luxury, comfort and speed . . . at no extra fare.

Daily The Congressional leaves Washington 4:00 P. M. Arrives New York 7:45 P. M. leading a fleet of 40 fast flyers between Washington and New York.

FLUSH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste, poisonous matter may develop, causing serious trouble. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, which have been used successfully by millions of people for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help to flush out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes. Get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist.

Filmland Stuff Is Shoreham's Picture Tonight

Grinding Cameras, Makeup and All; Other News of Night Spots.

By Chanticleer.

"Movie Night" will be inaugurated at the Shoreham tonight with all the excitement of a Hollywood lot. No spoofing about this—real pictures will be made . . . by a prominent New York director. Shots will be taken of the orchestra, the dancers and individuals. But the piece de resistance will be a contest in which the village's debs will imitate movie actresses.

The gals will all go for Jay Howard. Jay is the make-up expert who tells what and what not to wear. He knows all the secrets employed by Joan Crawford and Myrna Loy and Jean Harlow et cetera.

All of which is by way of being extra added entertainment. The regular floor show goes on as usual with Janette Hackett in dance creations—Manhattan Rhumba and Chiffon Bolero; Carl and Leone Bonner, harmony duo; Moran and Wiser, comedy hat jugglers. Barnee and the orchestra for dancing.

Downtown, Earl Lindsay's 1936 revue is being held over for still another week at the Lotus Restaurant. With costume changes and so on. This week Emmcee Al Elmer Norton introduces Paul La Varre and his brother in a comedy and hand-to-hand balancing act.

They've been doing the RKO and Orpheum circuits. Then there's a European dance team—DeCounpi and Marie—who entertained at the Chicago Century of Progress and are well known to Parisian audiences, and Julie and Evelyn Harlin, in "routines which are distinctly different." Bill Strickland and his Capitolians for the dancing. Judy Ellington warbles with the band.

Some of the folks who journey out to Griffith Farms for a lazy, comfortable evening are beginning to note the similiarity of the singing of Paul, with Brick Dornin's Varsity Six, to the old master crooner Vallee. N. B. C.'s Vince Callahan, who frequently favors Griffith Farms, should take note.

• • • •

It may be because "Anything Goes" is playing the village this week—or it may be the music is just naturally set with the citizenry.

Some of Those Entertaining After Dark

Three who entertain after dark: Lew Fink, the La Paree's "human vacuum cleaner;" Anna Sablukova, mezzo soprano of the Club Volga Boatman, and Johnny Barnes, Madrillon tap dancer.

The fact remains that Sidney's Mayflower band is called on time after time for those Cole Porter tunes these days. Benay Venuta, radio's gift to the production, dropped in at the Lounge, with other members of the company, a few nights ago.

It's a debut tonight at Club Habana for Shalita and Carroll—sensational dancers who will appear nightly on the Habana's little hardwood squares. And it's another big week for Bert Granoff, who is being lent Guy Scott's rendezvous through the courtesy of the Earle. Tomorrow, of course, another of those delightful Saturday luncheons with Moe Baer and the orchestra on tap for dancing until 3.

Maryland Club Gardens is chuckling over the District's likker law which requires all bottles, glasses and whatnot off the after-dark table promptly at midnight. Not so at the suburban Winter Garden. No one snatches and grabs the paraphernalia at the stroke of midnight. In case you never have visited Maryland Club Gardens, it's a couple miles out the Marlboro pike—and enjoys the distinction of having the flossiest bar in these parts, in addition to Jimmy Harris's band and the nightly floor show.

That fellow Karavaieff brought out two new dances at the Russian Troika this week. They're Russian—but not at all similar. Which, opines Karavaieff, is really something because Russian dances all look alike to most people. And his biggest number is in very slow tempo, which is further disillusioning since everyone expects a Russian dance to be fast and furious.

It's piano week at Heigh-Ho Club Big pianos and little pianos, gal pianists and gentlemen pianists. Pianos in the band and pianos on the floor, with dance numbers and between dance numbers. Burras Williams takes care of the Beethoven and Rachmaninoff requests. Ruth Hahn, Jimmie Nichols and Don Shook do the improvising. And the little piano follows Three Maids and a Mike around the floor. And downstairs—just for good measure—is Warner Kennedy, who will be remembered for his playing in the Taproom last year. He's just back from New York.

Those big open fireplaces at River Bend send the faint aroma of burning pine logs all over the room—and is it grand; yes, sir. However, Host Zepp has a long rope hanging over the cashier's desk which hooks up with the damper of the furnace some 150 feet away. It's just another case of burning logs for atmosphere but a furnace for heat. George Stein directs the McWilliams band for dancing.

• • • •

If there were any doubts in Host Matt Windsor's mind about broadcasting the Russian Gypsy Choir from the Volga Boatman—there's none now. Every night folks drop in to hear the choir in person, so to speak. Some of them really doubted that such a vocal organization existed. The new cocktail lounge is attracting late afternoon loungers who come to hear members of the upstairs floor show in an afternoon interlude.

• • • •

Phil Lynch is presenting Charles Farber, guitarist from his band, in a spot on the floor show this week at Childs Gingham Club. And Farber really does a job. Vera Miller enters her second week in a tap-toe dance spot. Phil and his boys for dancing.

Emory Daugherty has decided to hold off the finals in his big La Paree amateur contest until December 16. On that date the six preliminary winners meet in the grand finale, and the winner gets a week's engagement at La Paree. It's the applause that counts, boys and girls, so it will be your own fault if your favorite doesn't make the grade. Lew Fink stays for another week of fun-making. And another big Skyride (WJSV) Sunday night at midnight.

• • • •

It's a big super-floor show at the Swanee Dance Club tonight. Eva Sandra, Cuban rhumba exponent; Jeanne Lawrence, modernistic tap dancer; Jacqueline Embrey, in a new version of the piccolino, and the Radio Duo, otherwise known as the Mannen Sisters, form the talent. Dancing by Al Shay and his New Yorkers. And don't forget that informality that always characterizes an evening at the Swanee.

Culbertson On Bridge

Bridge Abroad.

We, as a nation, are inclined to complacency. Not in the faintly smug British manner; rather in the cocksure direction.

Naturally, this applies to our sports and games, contract bridge among them. For many years we have been truly superior in bridge caliber to any other nation, but, unless I am a bad prophet, this state of affairs may soon change. My foreign mail bears witness to the ever-increasing interest — and the concurrent improvement—in bridge abroad. From such widely separated points as Brazil and Sweden, Vienna and Shanghai, come reports and analyses of hands played that can be construed in only one way; America had better look to its bridge laurels!

Today's hand comes all the way from Athens, Greece, where it was played—admirably, I should say—by G. Geourgoulis. It illustrates a particularly interesting type of elimination play.

West, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 heart	1 spade
Pass	3 spades	4 clubs	4 spades
Double (final bid)

The bidding was fairly orthodox. True, East made a shaded opening bid, but his freak hand suggests his taking action, if only for psychological reasons. North should have jumped the one spade overcall to game, but possibly North and South were playing a system of their own.

West opened the heart seven, which was won by South's ace. The diamond queen was finessed successfully, and now declarer made the crucial play of the hand—a small club from dummy. East won and returned a high club, forcing the ace. Now the ace of diamonds was cashed and the third diamond ruffed by South. The king of hearts and a heart ruff in dummy completed the partial elimination plan. If West chose to overruff the third heart he would have to lead either a diamond, affording declarer a ruff and a discard, or away from the king and small trump—fatal in either case. If he discarded a diamond on the third heart he would be forced into the lead with trumps for the same result.

Pre-Inca Art Is On Exhibit In New York

Artist Sisters Rediscover Ancient Methods of Decoration.

Opening of Exhibition Is Attended by Peruvian Counselor.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Sister artists are becoming popular. First, Washington made the acquaintance of Elena and Berta de Hellenbranth, Hungarian artists who spent a winter here painting portraits of prominent citziens, and who return several times each year to be entertained by friends or to give exhibitions of their work.

Now, two other sisters, Elena and Victoria Izcue, of Peru, have arrived in New York to exhibit their rediscovery of the pre-Inca art of dyeing fabrics and ceramics. The Counselor of the Peruvian Embassy, Dr. Juan Mendoza Almenara, went to New York several days ago to attend the opening of their exhibition.

The Izcue sisters brought with them 400 samples of their art in design and dyeing, worked out on men's mufflers, women's scarves, dress materials, handkerchiefs and book bindings. As the opening of the tomb of King Tut-ankh-amen some years ago started a fashion revival using the gay prints of thousands of years ago, so these ancient patterns again may influence designs in printed materials.

The sisters also brought with them the famous Paracas textile, an embroidered cloth fashioned in Peru about 500 A. D., pre-dating the Incas. It has been on exhibition for years in Paris.

This relic of ancient Peruvian art measures 60 by 25 inches, has 84 embroidery figures on it, and is said to be the only example of its kind in the world. It is the property of Senor Don Rafael Larco Herrera, of Peru, and will be included in the Izcue sisters' exhibit.

The Senoritas Izcue studied art in Peru, and because of their research in ancient Peruvian dyeing and designs, were sent to study in Paris in 1927. There they perfected their ancient Peruvian motifs and designs, modernized to conform with contemporary materials of silk and cotton.

They will remain in New York for several months before returning to Peru, and hope to visit Washington with their work before leaving this country.

The de Hellebranths will drive from their home in Ventnor, N. J., to view the exhibit, after which they are due in Washington for a winter visit. The last time they were in the Capital, the Minister of Hungary and Mme. Pelenyi held a reception for them, following an exhibition of their portraits. The sisters paint the same subjects on separate canvasses and their work is of such different type as to produce startling comparisons.

British Envoy Cancels Dinner For Archbishop

Princess Victoria's Death Forces Change of Social Fete.

The Ambassador of Great Britain and Lady Lindsay have canceled the dinner they were to have given tomorrow in the embassy in honor of the Archbishop of York, the Right Honorable and Most Rev. William Temple, D. D. and Mrs. Temple, due to court mourning for the late Princess Victoria, sister of King George.

The Archbishop and Mrs. Temple arrived last evening in New York aboard the Bremen. On December 15 His Grace will preach at the morning service in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and at Trinity Church at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, in New York, on the same date.

The Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph W. Close, have canceled the dinner, to which invitations had been issued, for December 12, in honor of the Associate Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, owing to court mourning for the late Princess Victoria. Mrs. Close will not be "at home" this afternoon.

Mme. Wadsted And Son Return

Wife of Denmark Envoy Will Arrive in New York From European Trip.

Mme. Wadsted, wife of the Minister of Denmark, will arrive in New York tomorrow on board the S. S. Hensa, from Europe, and will be accompanied by her young son, Otto Gustavo.

The Minister left Washington yesterday for New York to meet his family upon their arrival. They will remain in New York over the week-end. Tomorrow evening the Minister and Mme. Wadsted will be guests of honor at a reception to be given at the College of the City of New York by the Constantini Boun Award, a society named for the former Danish Minister. Each year the society awards a trip to Denmark to some elderly Dane living in New York.

They will return to the Capital the early part of the week.

Mississippi Society Dance.

The Mississippi State Society will entertain at a dance and bridge party tomorrow evening.

Stay in Capital Plan of Widow Of Lister-Kaye

Former Natica Yznaga Is Be Entertained Here on Annual Visit.

Natica, Lady Lister-Kaye, who arrived in New York aboard the Majestic from England, is at the Ambassador Hotel there for her annual winter sojourn, and will come to Washington shortly to spend some time. Lady Lister-Kaye, who is the widow of Sir John Pepys Lister-Kaye, has been enjoying an unusually busy season in London.

Being a close friend of the royal family, she was among the chosen few who were invited to the opening of Parliament by an invitation from the King, and was also among those invited to the wedding of the Duke of Gloucester. Plans for that wedding were changed, however, and as it was not held in Westminster Abbey, but in a small chapel, only relatives were present.

Lady Lister-Kaye was formerly Miss Natica Yznaga, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Yznaga de Valle, of Louisiana and Washington. She is a sister of Consuela, the late Duchess of Manchester, wife of the eighth Duke of Manchester. The marriage took place in 1872. The duchess died in 1909, and the ninth duke has succeeded to the title, but many still remember the beautiful and talented Yznaga sisters. Lady Lister-Kaye spends much time abroad, visiting in England with friends and relatives and always visiting her other sister, Miss Emilie Yznaga, who makes her home in Paris. Lady Lister-Kaye also spends a part of each winter in Washington, where she is widely entertained.

Katharine Nash Makes Debut At Her Home This Afternoon

Evelyn Radeker Will Be Presented to Society at Hotel Luncheon.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Cleveland Nash, of 2500 Massachusetts avenue, will present their daughter, Miss Katharine Cleveland Nash, to Capital society at a tea this afternoon.

Miss Nash will have assisting her Miss Juliet Dulany, Miss Miriam Scott, Miss Marie Anne Greenough and Miss Anne Dudley Flannery. The debutante will wear a frock of turquoise-colored satin, modeled on Grecian lines, and will carry a bouquet of tea roses.

Receiving with Mrs. Nash, who will be gowned in black velvet, will be Mrs. Thomas Clay Arnold, of Savannah, Ga., grandmother of the debutante. Mrs. Nash will be assisted by Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mrs. Harral Mulliken, Mrs. Duncan Cameron, Mrs. Allen Nash, Mrs. Corrin Strong, Mrs. William S. Conant, Mrs. Austin Kautz, Mrs. Charles Colden Miller, Miss Nancy Duger, Miss Bertha Noyes and Mrs. Edwin MacKethan.

Mrs. James Warren Adams will present her niece, Miss Evelyn Radeker, to society at a large luncheon today at the Mayflower Hotel. The guests will include many of this season's debutantes and a few from other seasons who are close friends of Miss Radeker.

The former Assistant Postmaster General, Mr. Warren Irving Glover, will entertain at a tea dance in the ballroom of the Wardman Park Hotel Friday, January 3, from 4 until 7 o'clock, when he will present his daughter, Miss Frances Glover. Later the group assisting the debutante and their escorts will be guests at a buffet supper, to be followed by dancing.

The annual debutante dinner dance this season will be given January 18. The committee in charge will hold its final meeting Saturday morning, when the committee for next year's ball will be chosen.

The committee members are Mme. Prochnik, wife of the Minister of Austria; Mrs. John Washington Davidge, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mrs. Hamilton Fish, jr., Mrs. John Philip Hill and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman.

The place for this season's dance has not yet been selected.

Filigreed Bag Answers Man's Gift Problem

Skill of Needle Craftsmen Exemplified in Beautiful Tracery of Design.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE evening bag outfitted with a few make-up essentials is definitely scoring this season. It is a nicety that the fastidious woman adores, and the practical woman applauds. And what's more it's the answer to a man's problem what to buy for her.

One such bag sponsored by a certain beauty house is truly a dream of loveliness. It's the flat type, easy to carry. The frame, in either silver or gold plate is delicately filigreed with a minute flower and leaf motif. There's a rectangular clasp in keeping with the shape of the bag, filigreed in a proportionately larger design. Inside there's a finely ribbed white silk lining with three pockets shirred on one side for the fitting. On the opposite side is a double pocket for a comb, change purse, and round edged mirrow edged with gold and attached to the frame by a small gold chain.

The fabrics of the bags are exquisite. They were imported from Calais, the center of the lace and embroidery industry in France.

The skill of needle craftsmen is wondrously exemplified in the beautiful tracery of design. There are velvet lames in white, black and flame, satin lames in white, black, a brilliant jewel tone of red, and a stained window blue. On these a crinkly embossing of the velvet of satin lame forms a shower of petals fluttering softly against a rich background of intermingled gold and silver strands.

Except on special orders the fittings consist of the streamline double vanity in gold and platinum finish, streamline compact to match and a petit flacon of perfume.

A New Gift Package.

A WELL-KNOWN English beauty concern comes out this season with a new gift package at the modest price of $1.

It contains an excellent complexion cream, a cake of lavender scented soap, and a bottle of lavender water.

If you're looking for an appropriate present for someone who doesn't "go in" for the general run of cosmetics, then here's a package that will tickle her fancy.

One Dram Perfume Bottles

Looking as though they might have come from the treasure house of Croesus are the little perfume bottles shown in a downtown store.

These are small, one dram affairs, covered with delicately wrought gold filigree. The steamed stoppers are mounted with a single colorful jewel.

Those of you who'd like an inexpensive, lovely gift for someone will do well to give these a thought. Have them filled with a good perfume and you have something that's sure to be enthusiastically received.

Ever-Ready Lamps.

WHAT COULD be nicer to keep by the side of your bed than one of the little ever-ready lamps? When the doorbell breaks the heavy silence of the wee small hours, when the jangling phone wakes you from your slumbers, or when the baby cries and you have to rise hastily in the dark, it's mighty fine to have a little lamp by your bed that you can snap on as you carry it with you.

The lamps are so designed that a small battery inside lights a globe concealed under a milky white and rounded knob on top. Another globe in the bottom of the lamp is protected by glass. Viewed from this end your lamp becomes a searchlight.

Baby Beauty Aid.

ONE LARGE and thoroughly dependable beauty firm comes out this season with an adorable "baby package." It's sure to please his majesty the infant, and delight his doting parent.

In a neat and ornamental little box there are two cakes of oatmeal soap, and a generous box of oatmeal talcum powder. Yours for only 75 cents.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Metal-Adorned Collars, Cuffs Enhance Frock

By Laura I. Baldt, A. M.

For many years Assistant Professor of Household Arts, Teachers College, Columbia University, New York, N. Y.

SIMPLE to sew accessories that will help you stretch your Christmas budget. Glimpses of metal in collars and cuffs will "shine up" any dress, and make it appropriate for "dates" from noon to midnight. Then, complete your costume with a velvet hat to give that "party" touch. There's allure in rich jewel collars, and flattery in white satin collars.

Style No. 2839 designed for one size, includes all collars, cuffs and hat illustrated. For requirements see pattern envelope. Send 10 cents (coin is preferred) for Washington Post Pattern No. 2839. Write plainly YOUR NAME, ADDRESS AND SIZE. Fall and Winter Fashion Book costs 10 cents. Send for your copy today!

Address order to The Washington Post Pattern Department, 160 Fifth avenue, New York, N. Y.

Hall of Fame Gets 10 Women As Candidates

TEN women are among the 76 Americans upon whom the 108 electors of the Hall of Fame are now balloting. They are:

Susan B. Anthony, anti-slavery, temperance and suffrage leader. She led eight State campaigns for a votes-for-women amendment. From 1869 to 1905 she appeared before every Congress to plead for this cause.

Louisa May Alcott, author of "Little Women" and numerous other girls' books, who served as a nurse in the Civil War.

Mrs. Sarah Buell Hale, editor of Godey's Ladies Book, through which she campaigned for recognition of Thanksgiving as a national holiday. She wrote "Mary Had a Little Lamb."

Sacajawea, Indian guide, only woman with the Lewis and Clark Expedition, 1804-06, who carried a baby on her back through the journey.

Lucretia Mott, anti-slavery and suffrage leader. In 1840 she was elected by the American Anti-Slavery Society as a delegate to the World Anti-Slavery Convention in London, but on her arrival found women excluded from the meeting. She became a suffrage campaigner.

Lucy Stone, feminist. She started a movement to have married women retain their own names, and helped to organize the American Woman Suffrage Association.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton, feminist. With Lucretia Mott she issued the first call for a woman's suffrage convention, and campaigned for equality in education, property rights and for more intelligent divorce laws.

Mrs. Helen P. Blavatsky, Russian-born founder of the Theosophical Society of New York.

Other women nominees are Mrs. Alice McLellan Birney, author and reformer, and Elizabeth E. Hutter, philanthropist.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

IN A WAY we don't approve of putting too much work where we don't get credit for it. Which is one argument for letting the closet alone to be a fitting setting for the family skeletons. On the other hand, pretty closets are a lot like pretty underwear—a private delight and moral support for a lady who fares forth to face the world in tailor-made trimness.

Here are some ideas for closets that aren't hard or expensive to make ourselves. Get blue wall paper with white dots in it and paper all the insides of the closet with it. Paint the shelves coral color . . . then paper the hat boxes with blue paper and add coral-color ribbon handles to them. Coral hangers and hat stands would be pretty finishing touches.

Or paper the entire closet with flowered wall paper and have all the boxes papered with the exact same pattern with narrow black ribbon handles. The shelves could be painted black, too . . . with black hangers.

On the elegant side would be a closet lined with quilted peach satin, shelves painted in brown and hat boxes covered in jade green.

Send stamps for Miss Boykin's bulletin, "How to Hang Wall Paper."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: In answer to those who have written in to this column, kindly offering to relieve me of my old magazines and clothing offered worthy and needy recipients, let me say that my dilemma has been satisfactorily settled as a result of the helpful suggestions offered in this column September 28. I received a lovely letter of appreciation from the director of the Georgetown Boys' Club for the reading matter. I gave the other things to Friendship House to be distributed where most needed and feel sure there must have been other readers who were prompted to do likewise.

• • • •

I have one other probdlem. I have long been looking for a white girl or women, preferably in this vicinity—Georgetown—to come in for two or three hours at a time and help out with housework. The work would be light and varied, including simple mending, and I would like an adaptable person whom I could call on in an emergency. Someone who has finished high school, but who has not yet found regular employment, might be glad to earn a little extra money this way. Perhaps a student could arrange to come Saturdays and after school. Hoping anyone interested will get in touch with me through this column, I am, sincerely,

GEORGETOWN READER.

A Minor Perplexity.

DEAR GEORGETOWN READER: While it is the intention of this department to be as helpful as possible in aiding every applicant to solve his problem, it is not its purpose to serve as an employment bureau, a fact which I have pointed out in the past. There are commercial as well as Federal agencies established for that purpose, and the classified advertising columns of all newspapers are open to such appeals both from would-be employer and would-be employes.

• • • •

Such exceptions to this rule as I see fit to make from time to time are dictated by what appeal to me as peculiar circumstances attaching to a particular case. But I think you must agree with me there is nothing extraordinary urgent about a comfortably situated housewife's need of, or wish to find, a part-time domestic helper. It's just another of those minor preplexities which, in one guise or another, give a sort of salt-and-pepper seasoning to every adult's every day.

• • • •

In this instance, I am entirely willing to forward to you whatever inquiries are made in response to your appeal; but I wish once more to declare my stand against serving as an employment agency, pure and simple. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Sports Style Sweaters Are Getting the Plaudits

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—One of the star performers of this season's sportswear act is a good sweater. And the spotlighted models are combined with chamois—or slide-fastened—or fashioned after regular shirts.

The first sweater illustrated above is getting a big hand from sportsmen. It is of soft brushed wool in a variety of rich shades. Note the bib which is fastened on with snappers and eliminates the necessity of wearing a scarf or shirt. This model has a shirred back.

The camel's hair sweater with chamois front is another sports headliner. The chamois may be natural color but when dyed dark green, maroon or navy, it strikes a smart contrasting note.

Twin sweater sets for men are catching on. The combination of slipover sweater and coat sweater with slide fastener may be matched or contrasted. Good tip for Christmas gift seekers.

A fine, plain colored, lightweight sweater that is a high fashion note has an ascot flannel scarf that buttons to the neck band. The cable knit sweater that has become a classic by now is seen in a long sleeved, turtle neck model that is warm and comfortable for the more active winter sports.

Interesting effects are being worn in tattersall checks, windowpane checks and herringbone weaves. Plain colors in fancy knits are very popular.

A novelty that may or may not have a future is a double-breasted coat sweater.

Choosing a hat is not an ordeal if you know the principles which should govern the selection. An illustrated bulletin will be sent on receipt of a stamp. Address Amos Parrish, care of The Washington Post.

Need for Stage Talent Seen by Studio Director

Underwood & Underwood.

MISS CONSTANCE CONNOR BROWN.

Admitting Profession Is Overcrowded, Constance Connor Brown Says There Is Room for Qualified Beginners, However.

IT IS TRUE that hundreds of actors are always tramping Broadway looking for parts, but it is also true that there is room in the acting profession for good, trained beginners.

So maintains Constance Connor Brown, director of the Studio of Theater Arts, whose job it is to train young people for work in the theater.

Admitting that the acting profession is overcrowded, Miss Brown pointed out that the same can be said of most lines of work. And the acting profession, probably more than any other, she believes, suffers from the lack of a group of qualified beginners on which to draw for its new blood.

"It is a peculiar thing," she said, "how many people think that anybody can become an actor merely by getting up on a stage and acting. No one would attempt to practice law or medicine without a thorough preparation, yet countless persons will undertake the highly technical business of acting with perfect confidence that they are naturally actors and need no training of any kind."

Certain Qualifications Needed.

"There are certain qualifications that are definitely necessary to anyone who is to make a success in the theater. Among them are a willingness to work long and hard, intelligence and ability, and in most cases training. Native talent is desirable, of course, but many actors are able to attain, through diligent work and training, a perfection of technique equal to that possessed by those with more talent but less ambition and energy.

Miss Brown agrees with those who argue that experience is an important teacher of technique in the theater, but she points out that without training it is frequently impossible to obtain experience. Also, there are some absolute prerequisites to theater work which experience alone cannot teach, chief among them an adequate voice and effective speech.

"An adequate voice," Miss Brown said, "is one that has sufficient volume, good tone and resonance, flexibility, and resistance to fatigue. Acceptable stage speech is free from distortions of sound and localisms, and is clear and easily understandable."

Uses Her Own Method.

At the studio Miss Brown uses her own method in training voices and teaching speech. As soon as a pupil comes to the school, his speech is analyzed for defects. Perhaps it is found to be generally "sloppy," perhaps it is already good but his voice lacks sufficient volume for stage work, or he may have some peculiarities of pronunciation which make his speech unattractive to educated ears. Whatever his difficulty may be, he is given special exercises to remedy it.

Miss rown believes amateur and semi-professional stage experience has definite value in aiding actors to develop technique. At the studio she takes the trouble to train understudies for the important roles in each play largely in order to give more of her students a chance to benefit from the rehearsals. This week Miss Brown is concluding rehearsals on "Squaring the Circle," which the studio will present at Wardman Park Theater Tuesday and Wednesday, and she explained that for the first three weeks of rehearsals eight persons worked on the four leading roles.

Played in Stock Companies.

Miss Brown has developed her theories of acting and of teaching over a period of years spent in the professional and the nonprofessional theater. With a master's degree in dramatic art and literature from Cornell University under her arm, she tried New York, and for two years she "trod the boards" in stock companies there and in Washington. Then she went back to Cornell and worked for three years on the direction staff of the University Theater as assistant to Prof. A. M. Drummond, head of the department of public speaking. From there she went to Europe and studied under the tutelage of Prof. George Fuchs, former director of the Munich Artists Theater and an associate of Max Reinhardt. Returning to Washington, her girlhood home, she taught public speaking and directed plays at George Washington University and the University of Maryland. Last year she established her own school.

So Miss Brown's advice to young people with stage aspirations is to work hard, study, see as much as possible of the best acting on stage and screen and try to get some training and some experience. If there is no opportunity for formal training in a good theatrical school, she says, just learn everything possible as it comes along.

"Learn to dance, to sing, to play the musical instruments, to turn handsprings, to fence or just to walk well. If you can only whistle through your teeth," she says, "keep it. You'll need it in some part before you're through."

Balanced Diet Pays Dividends In Fuller Life

Program Rich in Vitamins Is Found Aid to General Health.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

IN yesterday's article attention was called to the fact that we may starve in the midst of plenty; that is, there may be an abundance of food available, but the appetite or the digestive tract or both may interfere with its utilization by the body. In this way dietary deficiencies develop and sometimes symptoms appear which may denote changes in the state of the body from health to disease.

Too often we think of diets as applicable to children particularly. On the contrary more dietary failures occur with those in middle life than with youngsters. In some of these cases a careful physical examination may disclose that the patient has a sallow complexion, coated tongue, soft or decaying teeth, tender gums, or soreness in certain muscles of the body, particularly the calves of the legs.

Although anemia may not be present, there may be a measurable rise in the blood pressure. With these patients a change in the diet to a balanced regime with adequate vitamins often brings about complete recovery. Gain in weight has resulted and pain in the calves of the legs disappears. One such case that came under my observation recently showed a marked improvement under the use of more milk, citrus fruits, tomato juice, whole wheat bread, an increased amount of protein and an ounce of cod liver oil daily.

M. L. Drazin reports several cases that emphasize the value of dietary studies in all complaints in which symptoms do not point definitely to organic disease. One patient was a woman, aged 49 years, who had had no illnesses other than those of childhood and latterly only frequent colds. In 1930 she began to complain of pains throughout the body and swelling of the feet. Physical examination disclosed no organic trouble other than some decayed teeth with spongy gums. The state of affairs was not clear at the first examination and she did not return to her physician until four years later, the symptoms continuing with more or less severity during the interim. At the examination made in 1934 a food deficiency was suspected and the patient was placed on a high vitamin program. With this was combined a larger amount of protein. Tenderness of the gums disappeared, as did a tendency to bruise easily, and her general health was greatly benefited. Vitamins A, B and C supplied the necessary elements to the diet.

The question arises, do some of our undernourished patients (those with dietary deficiencies) exhibit neuroses? The answer, in a few instances at least, is in the affirmative. Chronic complainers—those who present fleeting symptoms, pains, tingling, constipation, loss of appetite, pigmentation of the skin, and swelling of the extremities—are certainly subjects for careful dietary study.

As a general rule but few of us need give much concern to what we eat. Appetite has guided us along the dietary pathway. Instinctively we have craved what we needed. However, there are probably thousands of persons who are living on an abundance of food which constitutes, nevertheless, a subnormal diet.

Supply of Home-Made Candy Will Reduce Holiday Budget

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

CANDY is spelled with a big "C" in the Christmas budget of the average homemaker. A Christmas without sufficient candy is inconceivable, especially to the children, yet it can be a fertile source of after-Yuletide digestive trouble as well.

If there is time the wise mother will make her own candy for the Children's Christmas and thus be assured not only of its wholesomeness but its appropriateness to the special demands of the holiday season.

Chocolate Fudge.

(Courtesy Delineator Cook Book.)

2 cups sugar
1 or 2 squares of chocolate

Happy the child who finds a plentiful supply of white taffy among his Christmas things.

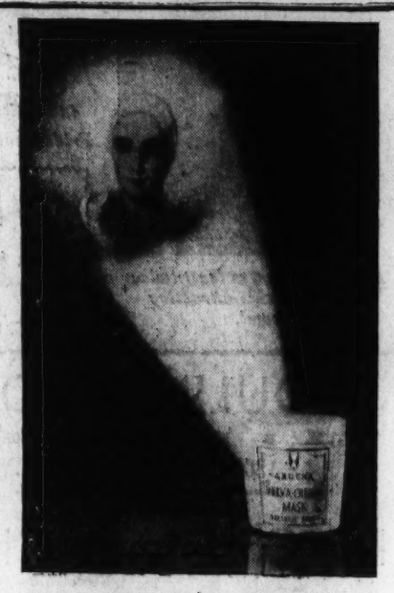
White Taffy.

2 cups grandulated sugar
½ cup water
1 teaspoon glycerin
2½ tablespoons vinegar
1 teaspoon lemon or vanilla

Boil the sugar, water, glycerin and vinegar to the hard ball stage. (260 degrees F.) Add flavoring. Pour on to a greased platter. When cool enough to handle, pull until very white, stretch into a long rope and cut into short pieces.

¼ teaspoon cream of tartar or 2 tablespoons corn sirup
2-3 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 tablespoons butter

Mix the sugar, milk, grated chocolate, cream of tartar or corn sirup and boil rather slowly, stirring until the ingredients are well blended. Boil to the soft ball stage. (238 degrees F.) Remove from the stove, add the butter, but do not stir it in. When lukewarm, add the vanilla and beat until it creams; that is, until the shiny appearance disappears and the fudge will hold its shape when dropped from the spoon. Spread it in a buttered pan and when it hardens mark it into squares.



NEW FACES FOR OLD with Velva Cream Mask!

Nothing but a Velva Cream Mask Treatment in Elizabeth Arden's Salon can give you an idea of what the latest and most extraordinary of all Elizabeth Arden's preparations will do for you. Lines are changed to smooth curves. Muddiness becomes rich coloring. Coarseness is refined to soft, fine texture. But try it. It's like turning in your old face for a lovely fresh new one. Then take a jar of Velva Cream Mask home and use it every day.

Of course you must cleanse and tone first, using Ardena Cleansing Cream and Skin Tonic. Together they're an unbeatable combination. And soothe afterwards with Velva Cream or Orange Skin Cream to nourish and keep the skin supple. This discourages wrinkles and makes the Mask's work easier and more effective.

Ely Attacks Entire Policy Of New Deal

Ex-Governor of Massachusetts Fears 'Economic Straitjacket.'

Scores Administration for Regulation of Production.

Planned economy as practiced by the New Deal threatens to drive America "into an economic straitjacket," former Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts told the District Bar Association last night.

He spoke at the annual dinner in honor of justices of the Court of Appeals and the District Supreme Court.

Ely characterized as of "doubtful constitutionality" the AAA processing taxes, the social security act, the Wagner labor relations act, the Guffey coal act, the holding company act and the Bankhead cotton act.

He assailed the Administration for its steps toward a planned economy.

Economic Planning.

"Economic planning," he said, "is Federal control of large production, distribution, financing, labor and foreign trade. It is an attempt to govern, regulate and control business.

"It is the idea of regulating production to the point where it will be commensurate with expected consumption. There is a job for you!

"I have met few men capable of minding successfully more than their own business, and I have met a few more than successful in minding their own business, but I cannot lay hold of the name of any man capable of running everybody's business.

"If there is such a single individual, we had better abolish the restrictions of government during his lifetime and give him the job. All that we will give up is our liberty, our right to think and our incentive to work.

"Of course, this task of a planned economy is too big a job for any one man in my opinion, it is still further beyond successful accomplishment by any board of men."

Radical Departure.

People who criticize "this new American system, which is called the New Deal," Ely added, "almost always are challenged to offer a better plan.

"If ever I saw a man desperate with family difficulties and bankrupt financially and the victim of rum, about to commit suicide," Ely answered, "I should try to stop him from doing that even though I had no remedy at hand to offer which would correct those difficulties.

"Fortunately, as bad as the economic situation may seem, I can see no reason for the United States to jump into the sea of chaos which economic planning must almost of necessity bring about.

"Just as experience demonstrates that the sunshine follows the rain, and the good harvest follows the bad harvest, so the good times follow the bad times. We have taken the medicine of depression which in and of itself cures the evils of a wasteful and extravagant expansion."

In a review of New Deal legislation Ely declared:

"Congress has no authority to regulate the business of manufacturing or the business of mining. Congress also lacks the authority to delegate its legislative powers to the Executive, and I do not see how it can either legislate the methods of agriculture or delegate to the Executive power unlimited control by rule and regulation."

Ely proposed sweeping changes in policy by the Government.

"I can see several ways of encouraging industry and capital investment," he said.

"I can see a stabilized money, a stabilized Government credit, by means of a balanced budget upon which all business depends, upon which ultimately all relief depends—I can see relief accomplished through the extension of Government credit to the several States with the tax means provided to take care of that credit."

Federal Waste.

Of Federal waste Ely charged: "Even in the short time during which the New Deal policies of relief have been in effect we have noticed in altogether too many instances the placing of Federal funds in lavish amounts where they would do the most good on election day."

Guests, in addition to the Court of Appeals and District Supreme Court jurists, included the Court of Claims justices, Attorney General Cummings, Williams L. Ransom, president of the American Bar Association; George Weems Williams, president of the Maryland State Bar Association, and Robert R. Carman, president of the Baltimore Bar Association.

Frank J. Hogan, former bar association president, was the toastmaster, while H. Winship Wheatley, association president, presided.

U. S. Asked to Send Scientists to Russia

Capt. J. F. Hellweg, superintendent of the Naval Observatory, suggested yesterday that Government astronomers be sent to central Russia next summer to observe a total eclipse of the sun.

The event, due on June 16, "will be best seen from a point in central Russia," Capt. Hellweg said.

Character Help To Be Schools' Goal in Future

Grades Will Be Unimportant, Teachers Institute Told by Ballou.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, turned prophet yesterday.

He spoke about the future in the educational system to 1,200 teachers in the auditorium of Central High School, the first Teachers Institute meeting of the season.

There won't be so much emphasis on marks in the future, he said. Teachers will be interested rather in the effect of the subject matter on the pupils in the years after graduation.

Development of character would be the prime objective. Courses would be regarded as a means to that end, rather than as ends in themselves.

The trend is already in that direction in Washington. It started with the Congressional demonstration in character education, with pupils in eight schools now having their programs organized to develop them individually.

And when it comes to measuring the success of education, this question is going to be the best—has the child done his best? Has he tried as hard as he might? Has he been using all his capacities?

Attacks Investigated.

Two cases of teachers attacked by pupils in the colored schools are being investigated by his office, Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou reported yesterday. He declined to comment on the announcement by Dr. J. Hayden Johnson, member of the Board of Education, that an effort would be made to permit teachers and principals to administer corporal punishment to pupils if they thought it necessary.

Both cases were cited to the board Wednesday by Dr. C. Herbert Marshall, physician, and Dr. Johnson said an "epidemic of such happenings" appeared to be under way.

Dr. Ballou, added, however, that the investigations might be closed without board action, and that "they may never come before the board again." He said there had been previous suggestions that corporal punishment permission be restored. School officials said yesterday that no reaction on Dr. Johnson's announcement had been received.

Flag to Be Presented.

An American flag, which is to stand in the board room in the District Building, will be received by the District Commissioners at 10:15 o'clock today from the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Drys Ask Unity In D. C. Battle For Prohibition

Speakers in Four Churches Point to Traffic Deaths and Arrest Increases.

In four churches, anti-liquor spokesmen last night advocated a consideration of dry force behind the new Guyer bill, drastic measure that would prohibit any consumption or dealings in liquor in Washington in a manner more rigid than the old Sheppard bill.

J. Raymond Schmidt, of the United Dry Forces, threw into the controversy a statement that the new liquor stores were worse than pre-prohibition saloons because, he said, they employed girls.

Before 75 persons in the Mount Rainier (Md.) Christian Church, Schmidt also charged that automobile accidents had started to rise immediately after repeal. The Rev. Fred L. Miller presided.

Deets Pickett Speaks.

Deets Pickett, secretary of the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, spoke before 200 persons in Calvary Baptist Church. He said:

"We have to do something, and something radical. While the country is consuming only 70 per cent as much whisky as it did before prohibition, still it nearly doubled liquor consumption in the last fiscal year, as compared with the 1934 fiscal year. The country cannot support the burden of a liquor traffic that is increasing in any such fashion as that."

Figures on a rise in jail commitments here, both as a whole and for intoxication alone, were cited to a meeting in the Union Methodist Episcopal Church by Miss Laura Lindley, research secretary of the Antisaloon League of America.

Shows 60 Per Cent Gain.

Total commitments during the 1935 fiscal year, she said, were 32.3 per cent above the 1932 fiscal year, while commitments for intoxication, being 12,698 out of a total of 20,590, showed a 60.4 per cent increase.

She said that 155 persons under 20 years of age were jailed for intoxication in 1935 as compared with 74 in 1932.

"Even though the intoxicated individual does not attempt to drive, he is a menace to himself and the driver of a motor vehicle, as is shown by the increased number of pedestrians killed or injured while 'under the influence' of liquor."

Another dry meeting was held in the Zion Baptist Church.

Why hesitate to give something practical because the gift may seem matter-of-fact? Such a simple thing as a handkerchief can have so much style, that it can give a decided effect of novelty. Rum Dealers Unite to Help Enforce Law

Form Vigilante Group to Watch Places for Violations.

ABC Board Head and Leaders of Industry Laud Plan.

Wets got together last night for the first time since the start of the new prohibitionist drive to dry up Washington. Newly organized liquor dealers announced they would set up a vigilance committee to purge their business of any law-violating elements.

The wets met in the Willard Hotel and got the indorsement of the chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, a Congressman, a former national prohibition administrator now representing distillers, and an importers' representative.

Their organization, the Associated Beverage Dealers, according to its secretary, A. D. O'Connor, was incorporated by prominent retailers ten days ago. He said it aimed to combat dry propaganda, promote business, maintain high standards, root out improper and unethical practices, stimulate relations with allied industries and disseminate information.

Offutt Commends Them.

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board chairman, George W. Offutt, told the dealers the board thanked them for the fact that 95 per cent of them had co-operated completely in obeying the liquor control law, and that "the formation of this association is the one thing we've been praying for since the board was organized."

He called upon the dealers to help enforce the law by notifying the board of violations, and O'Connor then announced that a vigilance committee would be formed.

Offutt said the liquor industry had taken 2,000 unemployed persons from Washington's streets, was paying $3,000,000 a year in salaries, and was putting $2,000,000 into the District's tax revenues.

"The citizens of Washington will have to make up their minds that if they fool around with your business that they will have to dig down into their own pockets to make up the revenues they will lose," Offutt said.

Dirksen Promises Aid.

Representative Everett Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, ranking minority member of the House District Committee, indorsed the wets' actions, and pledged his "unalterable opposition to drying up the City of Washington, because if we permit Washington to be dried up, it will be only the beginning of a drive for the entire country."

Frankly, he said, he was an interested party. His Illinois district, including Peoria, has five distilleries, three or four label factories, two cooperage factories and a brewery, and just outside it is the largest bottling plant in the country.

Dry sentiment, Dirksen said, is crystallizing. He also called upon the liquor dealers to help in law enforcement. He said amendments to the national liquor laws would be offered to hamper use of molasses in manufacturing beverages, hitting at illicit distilleries.

Capital to Ask New Aid Fund Of Congress

FERA $100,000 December Allotment Is Too Small, Allen Declares.

President Approves Trio of WPA Projects for District.

A plan to seek appropriation by Congress of additional District funds for relief was approved informally yesterday by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

How much money will be sought he did not know, Hazen said, adding that the commissioners will await a report from Commissioner George E. Allen, relief and works administrator.

"No one should be permitted to starve to death, but relief should be cut as much as possible," Hazen said. "Relief has, perhaps, been too liberal in some instances. For example, I am informed it has made it difficult to get domestic help."

Confronted with a prospective breakdown of public relief as it has existed in the District, Commissioner Allen said additional money would have to be obtained from some source. He is confident he will get $100,000 in Federal funds to tide over this month, but that is expected to be the last Federal allotment.

Sum Held Insufficient.

Even that amount will fall short of meeting the estimated cost of relief in the District this month, despite a 25 per cent horizontal cut in relief payments and administrative expenses, Commissioner Allen said.

Future prospects were not materially brightened by receipt of notice that President Roosevelt had approved three more PWA projects. One called for expenditure of $79,200 for construction of a permanent summer health camp for tubercular children. A site for the camp has not been selected. It has been proposed to construct it on the grounds of the District sanatoria at Glenn Dale, Md. Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, is head of a committee studying the selection of a site.

Construction of a golf course for colored persons in Anacostia Park, at a cost of $150,500 was also approved.

Repairs Approved.

The third project was one for $18,386 for repair of equipment and related repairs and for some of the work incident to the collection, repair and distribution of toys for children of the needy at Christmas. The sum of $100,000 was allowed for these projects, although their estimated total was $248,086. Additional funds for them may be advanced later.

Where nursery schools are to be located, when they are to be operated, how many are to be reopened, whether they are to be limited to children of relief families, children of working mothers, and other questions are to be decided on the basis of a survey now being made under direction of William C. Cleary, assistant deputy works administrator, Mr. Allen said.

Traffic Toll Now 110; Experts Tell Reasons

Highway Research Board Meets Here to Study Accident Causes.

A visiting traffic engineer from Mars, reading current accounts of highway acidents, might well infer that no one on this planet ever had thought of safety in traffic the summer of 1935, Sidney J. Williams, director of the public safety division of the Chicago National Safety Council, told the Highway Research Board in session yesterday at the Naitonal Academy of Sciences.

The visitor from Mars might also infer, Williams said, "that the welter of blood on our highways was only exceeded by the ignorance and indifference of our city halls, our State houses and our schools."

Nevertheless, he added, much has been learned and much has been done about traffic.

"The first thing we have learned is that there is no one cause of accidents in traffic or anywhere else," he said.

Three Wrong Things.

There are three wrong things that contribute to death or injuries of pedestrians and drivers on the highways, Williams stated. They are: (1) Serious defects of mind or body, such as epilepsy or poor vision; (2) the lack of skill, and (3) the faulty attitude, "the taking of chances, the optimistic belief in good luck, the assumption that the other fellow will get out of the way.

"Knowing these things that contribute to accidents," he went on, "we know how they may be avoided—simply by avoiding all of these wrong things.

"As to the car and the highway, this means building and maintaining them to reasonaby high standard and, above all, avoiding the unexpected and unreliable.

"As to the individual, it means a combination of fairly good mental and physical health, a fair degree of skill, and also a fair degree of foresight, caution and consideration for others.

Unusual Accidents.

"An individual having these qualities of a safe driver or a safe walker can positively avoid any possibility of accident except those which result from other wrong things entirely outside of his control.

"The latter happens sometimes, as when a car hits a pedestrian peacefully standing on the sidewalk or when two vehicles collide and are thrown into the path of a third—but not very often."

While many persons can maintain no-accident records and others have high accident marks, Williams said, "it is a mistake to believe that these relatively high-accident drivers are responsible for most of our casualties.

"The fact is that a great many, probably a majority of drivers involved in accidents have had no previous accident record. They are drivers who are not bad enough to go looking for trouble but not quite good enough to keep away from it."

Safety Zones Hazard.

Hawley S. Simpson, research engineer of the American Transit Association, New York, read a paper on "Safety Zones" in which he cited records to prove that safety zones, unless properly built and lighted, constitute a hazard rather than a protection to pedestrians.

Mrs. Emma Treadwell, 84, Hurt Fatally by Hit-Run Driver.

Again yesterday a name was added to Washington's traffic death list.

It was that of Mrs. Emma Treadwell, 84, of 101 Second street northeast, struck last Friday by a hit-and-run driver.

Mrs. Treadwell's death made the year's list stand at 110. It was the eighth consecutive day on which a death has been recorded.

The aged woman was on the way to the nearby George Washington Inn to have dinner with her daughter, Miss Annie Treadwell, an attorney in the Treasury Department, when injured.

Two Serious Injuries.

Mrs. Treadwell died at Casualty Hospital shortly before midnight. The driver of the car has not been apprehended.

Two serious injuries were reported. Adena Crowe, 35, of 1822 Vernon street northwest, was treated at Casualty Hospital for a fractured skull.

This accident occurred at Tenth and M streets northwest. It was a collision between an auto operated by William Crowe, 35, of 1822 Vernon street northwest, and another driven by Traffic Policeman Connor H. Gould.

Gould, who has been on sick leave since November 5, when he was injured in a motorcycle accident while on duty, was unhurt. Crowe sustained cuts.

Hit by Postal Truck.

Harry Butler, 35, colored, 633 U street northwest, was struck and seriously injured by a postoffice truck in the 2200 block of Georgia avenue last night. Attendants in Freedmen's Hospital, where Butler was taken, said he may have a fractured skull. Police said the truck driver was U. H. Forster, 29, of 1836 Eighteenth place southeast.

A coroner's jury exonerated two motorists of blame after inquests into the traffic deaths of Harry W. Andrews, 68, of 3603 New Hampshire avenue northwest, and Albert Walmsley, 68, of 1133 Vermont avenue northwest.

Louis F. Ruehl, 23, of 708 Irving street, was absolved in the death of Andrews. Witnesses testified Andrews stepped into Eckington place from behind a parked car.

In the second verdict the jury cleared Henry A. Magnuson, 40, of 1480 Chapin street northwest, operator of the car which fatally injured Walmsley last Friday. It was testified Walmsley walked directly into the path of Magnuson's car.

Tag Applications Lag.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer yesterday said more than 50,000 Washington motorists will be without license plates unless they "snap out of it."

He said that only 31,000 tags have been issued in the ten-day period just passed. He warned that only 26 days remain before the deadline, January 1.

Grant Speeds 'Bottleneck' Elimination

PWA Allots $34,000 for Removing F St. Steps of Old Patent Office.

Original $100,000 Is Not Enough to Carry Out Plans.

The Public Works Administration yesterday announced an additional allotment of $34,000 for remodeling of the old Patent Office building, thereby insuring swift action on a project that has been hanging fire several years. Removal of the building's south steps will permit the elimination of the notorious F street "bottleneck" between Seventh and Ninth streets, long condemned as a traffic hazard.

Continued agitation against the "bottleneck" led to a $100,000 PWA appropriation last year. When bids for the alteration contract were opened, however, it was found that even the lowest was in excess of the allotment. Accordingly, all bids were rejected.

The National Park Service, which has charge of Government buildings, scaled down the specifications to conform to the funds available. The main entrance on F street, including an elaborate lobby, was reduced to a mere door. Other changes were made to effect economies. Bids again were solicited.

Still hopeful, nevertheless, that the PWA would allot additional funds to allow carrying out of the original scheme, park officials delayed the contract award. Yesterday, with the announcement that another $34,000 would be granted, they revealed that the work will be done by the Viking Construction Co., of New York, which submitted the lowest figures on both the original and modified specifications.

Work will start "very soon," said John L. Nagle, parks engineer.

Widening of F street between Seventh and Ninth, which will abolish the present "bottleneck," will be done by the District Highway department. Remodeling of the building, which houses the Civil Service Commission, must be completed before a start can be made on the street widening.

Fight Victim Treated For Fracture of Skull

Carl Spitzinger, 45, of 27 Seventh street northeast, was taken to Casualty Hospital last night suffering from a skull fracture, he told attendants he received when struck by a beer bottle during a dispute at Seat Pleasant, Md.

Seat Pleasant investigators said they understood Spitzinger was injured at the home of a relative Wednesday night and had been removed to the hospital from his Washington home.

Life Insurance Called Cushion For Depression

Payments Averted Much Want, Nollen Tells Presidents' Meeting.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 5.—Life insurance was described as a cushion for depressions today by Henry S. Nollen, of Des Moines, Iowa, before the convention of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents. Asserting that more than $16,000,000,000 has been paid out by life insurance companies since 1930, Nollen said:

"This vast amount served in large part to prevent much want and relieve distress. Without this aid our country would have faced a more serious crisis."

Philip A. Benson, president of the savings division of the American Bankers Association, termed present low interest rates abnormal. "It is not unreasonable to expect some adjustment upward," he said.

Discussing railroad securities, Benson said:

"Perhaps there is in this country today too much railroad mileage, too many terminals and too much equipment."

State supervision of insurance companies was cited by William A. Sullivan, of Seattle, president of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners, as "a constructive and creative factor in the realm of insurance."

"While it has perhaps rightfully been said that no amount of supervision has ever built an insurance company, yet supervision must be given credit for major contributions," he said.

Nollen, president of the Equitable Life Insurance Co. of Iowa, is chairman of the convention.

Paris Again Reports Large Loss of Gold

Paris, Dec. 5 (AP).—The Bank of France today reported withdrawals of 2,834,000,000 francs worth of gold during the week ending November 28, bringing the withdrawals during the recent monetary crisis to 5,967,000,000 francs in gold. (The franc is worth approximately 6.585 cents.)

The gold reserves now have dropped to 66,190,775,000 francs, reducing the gold coverage on bank notes to 69.94 per cent. The drain on gold apparently has been halted, but the bank's discount rate, which was raised to stop the outflow, remained at 6 per cent.

Great Northern Rights In New Bond Offering

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—Great Northern Railway Co. announced today that stockholders will be permitted to subscribe to its forthcoming $100,000,000 bond offering at the rate of one $1,000 bond for each 25 shares of stock held.

The bonds will be convertible into stock at $40 a share for half of each individual's holding and at $75 for the balance. The coupon rate will be 5 per cent and the bonds will be callable at 105 for the first nine years and 101 in the tenth year.

Paint Mainly Luxury In Colonial Times

Paint in earliest colonial times was mainly a luxury, antiquarians have recently discovered. At first crudely mixed paint, inspired by the Indian red paint derived from clay, enhanced the appearance of room paneling or floor. When mahogany for cabinet work came into use, homemade furniture was often painted brick red in imitation of the expensive tropical wood.

Tank Corp. Acquires Procter & Gamble Fleet

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—General American Transportation Co. announced today it has taken over the entire fleet of tank cars of the Procter & Gamble Co. and entered into a long-time contract to handle the latter's tank car requirements.

New Bank Law Best Available, Fleming Says

A.B.A. Head Holds It Could Have Prevented 1929 Inflation.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 5.—Robert V. Fleming, president of the American Bankers Association, in a speech today praised the banking act of 1935 and said such safeguards might have prevented the 1929 stock-market inflation. Fleming, who is president of the Riggs National Bank, of Washington, D. C., spoke before the New York State Chamber of Commerce. He cited the control machinery set up under the banking acts of 1933 and 1935 and said:

"It is my belief that if we had had the machinery now available, and if it had been utilized, the inflation in the stock market, which reached such topheavy proportions in the fall of 1929 could have been prevented."

He added that the control measures "are only effective where bank credit is being used, and they provide no control over either individual or corporate buying of securities for cash." He added:

"I do not wish to create the impression that the safeguards I have outlined constitute a complete control and a guarantee against recurrences of the unfortunate happenings of the past.

"It may be that they are entirely adequate to cope with the problems of inflation or deflation by themselves, but economic forces, which are beyond our present vision, may develop the need for additional machinery from time to time.

"However, I do think the law as it now stands gives us the best machinery we have yet been able to devise to cope with conditions such as have been presented to date."

Class I Railroads Earn 1.79% Net

Class I railroads of the United States for the first ten months of 1935 had a net railway operating income of $397,458,232, which was at the annual rate of return of 1.79 per cent on their property investment, according to reports to the Bureau of Railway Economics of the Association of American Railroads made public yesterday. In the first ten months of 1934, their net railway operating income was $393,922,090 or 1.76 per cent on their property investment.

Of 145 Class I railroads reporting, 27 failed to earn expenses and taxes in the first ten months of 1935, of which 9 were in the Eastern District, 5 in the Southern and 13 in the Western District.

Reaping Profits in Rail Shares Halts Market's Upward Course

News Developments of the Day Leave Operators Hesitant on the Trend of Immediate Future.

By Frank MacMillen,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Dec. 5.—The rail shares, which pushed uphill to a new 1935 high on Wednesday, halted abruptly today as traders clamped on the brakes. The sudden stop, analysts said, reflected Wall Street's disposition to take profits in this group following two successive days of new 1935 highs.

The Associated Press average of 15 rail issues was down 0.5 of a point to 30.7, while the combined average of 60 shares declined 0.3 to 55.3. Transactions totaled 2,357,770 shares against 3,002,741 the previous day. The financial district's mood was reflected by the fact net gains and losses were about evenly divided.

The day's news, brokers said, did not readily lend itself to stock market interpretation. Some professed to see in foreign reports an improvement in chances for peaceful settlement on the Italo-Ethiopian dispute. Others said the peace horizon looked darker.

French Gold Losses.

The weekly statement of the Bank of France, which appeared during the heated political debate in the Chamber of Deputies, showed a gold loss of about $186,476,000. Meanwhile the market took note of stoppage of all official information on Italy's financial condition. The last Bank of Italy statement was on October 20.

Santa Fe and Pennsylvania Railroad both rose to new highs during the early trading, but both closed lower at 57⅜ and 32, respectively. Fractional losses were suffered by Baltimore & Ohio at 17½ and New York Central at 28¾.

In spite of the somewhat dampened ardor for the rails, a scattering of specialties made progress on the upside. Leader of the pack was A. O. Smith, up 5⅞ to 57⅞. Others with gains of 1 to 2 or more points, some of them at new highs during the day, were Atlas Tack at 18⅛, Celotex "new" at 18¾, Certainteed preferred at 74½, Cluett Peabody at 35½ and Hercules Motor at 34¾.

Woolworth greeted the sales report with a decline of ½ to 56. November sales were 4.8 per cent ahead of the month a year ago, but the 11 months' total was .8 of 1 per cent under the like period last year.

Telephone Higher.

American Telephone stiffened ¾ to 158¾ on the report that installations in November were more than 53,000 ahead of last year compared with the gain of 16,700 over 1933 scored in November a year ago.

The "continued activity in most commercial lines," cited by Dun & Bradstreet was confirmed by the agency's report of bank clearings for the week ended December 4, which included the Thanksgiving Day. It showed an increase of 20.6 over the like week of 1934.

Chrysler at 84⅛ and General Motors at 55½ were fractionally higher. United States Steel was down ⅜ at 47⅞. Westinghouse gave up 1½ at 93. Industrial liens put on the best performance in the bond market, which was generally steady. United States Government issues were mixed.

Wheat closed ¼ of a cent a bushel lower, to ⅝ higher; corn was up ¼ to ½ of a cent; cotton was 5 to 30 cents lower.

In the foreign exchange market the pound sterling was off ⅛ of a cent to $4.93⅜. The French franc was .00¼ of a cent down at 6.58½ cents.

Brokers' Loans Rise $32,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers held by weekly reporting member banks in New York City amounted to $919,000,000 for the week ended December 4, an increase of $32,000,000 for the week.

The loans for the week ended December 5, 1934, were $969,000,000.

Wrigley Declares Special Dividend

Chicago, Dec. 5 (AP).—Directors of William Wrigley jr. Co. today declared a special dividend of 50 cents per share. The dividend is payable January 2 to stockholders of record December 20.

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—Directors of Liquid Carbonic Corporation today voted an extra dividend of 25 cents on the capital stock, in addition to a quarterly dividend of 40 cents. The quarterly payment places the stock on a $1.60 annual basis against $1 previously. Both distributions will be made February 1 to stockholders of record January 17.

Lake Ore Shipments Up 30 Per Cent in Year

Duluth, Minn., Dec. 5 (AP).—Iron ore shipments from Lake Superior ports this season, John Woodfill, of the M. A. Hanna Co., announced today, were 30 per cent greater than in 1934 and the best in several years. The total was 28,362,098 tons.

D. C. Clearings 21.6% Higher Than Last Year

22 Leading Cities Show Average Gain of 20.6 Per Cent.

The Washington Clearing House reports a total of $20,508,400.43 for the week ended December 4, which is an increase of $3,653,612.87 or 21.6 per cent over last year's total of $16,854,787.56 for the same period. Compared with the total for the week ended November 27, clearings increased $2,540,029.49 or 14.1 per cent.

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—Further large gains in bank clearings reflect continued activity in most commercial lines. The total for the 22 leading cities in the United States for the five days ended Wednesday, December 4, as reported by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $5,441,745,000, against $4,511,624,000 a year ago, an increase of 20.6 per cent. For the preceding week the gain was 31.0 per cent. At New York City clearings were $3,537,847,000, an increase of 18.9 per cent over the amount reported last year, while the aggregate for centers outside of New York City of $1,903,898,000 was 23.8 per cent higher.

The week's total for the five days was slightly less than for the six days of the preceding week.

Government Orders Spur Woolen Mills

New York, Dec. 5.—The awarding of contracts by the United States Army and Civilian Conservation Corps for 2,093,702 yards of flannel shirtings and 1,070,400 yards of 20-ounce suitings featured activity in wool goods markets during the week, according to the New York Wool Top Exchange Service.

The fulfilling of the contracts will require the use of 6,000,000 to 7,000,000 pounds of grease wool, and will force mills receiving them to step up production sharply in the next two to three months.

53,300 Stations Gained By American Telephone

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. reported today a gain of 53,300 stations in November, compared with a gain of 16,700 stations gained in November last year.

The station gain for 11 months ended November 30, 1935 was 413,300 compared with 285,700 in the first 11 months of 1934, the company announced.

Gay Deplores Scarlet Thread Of Sectionalism

Misunderstanding of Exchange is Cause of Bias, He Says.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

San Francisco, Dec. 5.—Speaking today before the Chamber of Commerce and the San Francisco Commercial Club, Charles R. Gay, president of the New York Stock Exchange, said that one of his problems was the widespread dislike of Wall street and the New York Stock Exchange, a prejudice which he said was "at least partially a manifestation of the spirit of sectionalism which runs like a scarlet thread through the American social pattern."

"In the approximate center of the financial district," he said, "stands the exchange, about 135 of whose 1,375 members represent member firms located outside of New York City. Traded on the exchange are approximately $80,000,000,000 of securities of companies whose plants and pay rolls contribute to the business welfare of thousands of American communities. The exchange is further bound to every considerable city and town in the United States by more than 400,000 miles of telephone and telegraph wires maintained by member firms. An institution of such scope is inescapably a national possession and a national responsibility. If ever there were a time when it could be regarded as a private club, that time is definitely past.

Clearing House for Nation.

"In days long ago the New York Stock Exchange was quite a provincial institution, and the great bulk of its business originated in the city of New York—in fact, within a mile or so of Wall street. Today, the very opposite is true. The business of the stock exchange has grown to hundreds of millions of shares and the larger part of it originates outside of New York. These transactions reflect the opinion and judgment of investors here on the Pacific Coast, throughout the Midwest, the South, the Southwest and the North. And this is why the New York Stock Exchange is truly a national institution. It is, in fact, no exaggeration to say that the stock exchange is the clearing house of investment opinion in every Main street under the United States flag and in the investment centers of the world outside.

"The stock exchange—for all its economic utility, its rigid rules for the protection of investors and the austere enforcement of its rules—is, I frankly admit, misunderstood by a large part of the public. That is why we are profoundly concerned with replacing the public's misconceptions of the stock exchange with a real understanding of its functions and the way in which it fulfills them.

"I conceive it to be the duty of officials of the exchange not to propagandize, but to try to explain to the public what and why stock exchanges are."

By Lewis F. Atchison.

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY'S long and arduous battle against odds to attain national football prominence was crowned yesterday afternoon when its team received an invitation to represent the North, probably against Vanderbilt University, in the annual New Year's Day Orange Bowl gridiron classic at Miami.

Telegrams from Gov. David Sholz of Florida and W. Keith Phillips, chairman of the Orange Bowl committee, advised Head Coach Arthur J. (Dutch) Bergman of the committee's decision, one that conferred upon Catholic University the highest honor ever bestowed upon a local football team.

Gov. Sholz's message read: "Orange Bowl committee extends to the Catholic University football team an invitation to participate in the annual New Year's Orange Bowl classic at Miami. Please wire your acceptance immediately."

Phillips' wire was identical with the State chief executive's.

C. U. Granted Permission.

Bergman immediately conferred with Mgr. Patrick J. McCormick, acting rector of the university, who granted the team permission to accept the bid.

Mgr. McCormick said: "I heartily approve of the game, and I expect Capt. Ed Karpowich to lead the Cardinals to another victory."

Bergman wired his acceptance immediately. His reply read: "We are deeply gratified and highly honored by the action of the Orange Bowl festival committee in selecting the Catholic University football team to represent the North in this contest. We feel that our team is fully representative and will give a good account of itself in the classic."

News of the invitation spread like wildfire over the Brookland campus and corridors adjacent to Bergman's office were jammed with students almost delirious with joy. Several members of the football squad were engaged in basketball practice when the announcement was made, and Coach "Fod" Cotton, who also is football line coach, hastily called an adjournment to join in the shouting, cheering, singing and general reign of merriment.

Vanderbilt Undecided.

Catholic's opponent in the Orange Bowl previously had been designated as Vanderbilt, one of the outstanding elevens in the Southeastern Conference, but whether the Commodores would accept their bid had not been definitely decided last night. Well founded reports emanating from the university indicated that serious objections to Vanderbilt's participation in the game would be raised by members of the faculty committee on athletics.

Should Vanderbilt decline the invitation, it probably will be offered to Auburn, another member of the Southeastern Conference. Either team, however, must receive the approval of conference officials, who are to meet in Atlanta next

C. U. Coach and Players Hail News of Miami Game Invitation

Manero Leads Orlando Golf With a 68

By the Associated Press.

ORLANDO, Fla., Dec. 5.—Slashing three strokes from par with a deadly short game, Tony Manero, of Greensboro, N. C., today snatched the upper hand for the first round of the $2,000 Orlando Open Golf Tournament with a 68 for the 18 holes. He was out in 33 and back in 35.

Shaded by a stroke, five members of an outstanding field dogged Manero's heels and won strategic positions for the 54 holes to follow—18 tomorrow and 36 Saturday.

They were Ky Lafoon, of Chicago, with 34—35—69; Roy Horan, home club professional, 33—36; A. B. Thom, of Lancaster, Pa., 37—32; Lighthorse Harry Cooper, of Chicago, 35—34, and Jimmy Thompson, Ridgewood, N. J., 35—34.

Tony Penna, of Pensacola, carded a pair of 35s for 70 and a tie with Al Krueger, of Beloit, Wis., and Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y.

Bunched at par 71 were F. Moore, of St. Louis, with 36—36; Frank Walsh, of Chicago, 36—35; Tom Creavy, of Albany, N. Y., with 38—33, and A. C. Fondreu, of Memphis, Tenn., 33—38.

Claude Harmon, 19-year-old Orlando boy who holds the Florida Junior championship, posted a 35—37 to lead the amateurs with a 72. A number of pros were tied at the same figure.

Wiffy Cox and Roland Mackenzie,

Mautte Fordham Captain.

New York., Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Frank Mautte, right halfback, from New Haven, today was elected captain of Fordham's 1936 football team by a meeting of the letter men. Mautte, a junior, replaces Joe Maniaci, who graduates next summer.

Bennett Leads Dartmouth.

Hanover, N. H., Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Gordon P. Bennett, of Swampscott, Mass., star right tackle, was elected captain of the 1936 Dartmouth football team tonight.

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

WITH his prepaid, all-expense trip to Germany endangered by the rising wave of protest against participation of the United States team in the 1936 Olympics, Mister Avery Brundage in his most recent pronouncement has declared that the American team will compete, willy-nilly.

POVICH.

Mister Brundage is quoted in the public prints this morning as saying that "the United States will send a team to Germany despite whatever action the A. A. U. may take" in its convention this week at which United States participation will be an issue. Mister Brundage thereby wins the world's free-style record for obstinacy which he can add to his title as the No. 1 Innocent of the Land.

Because Reichsfuehrer Hitler failed to dispatch a special messenger to the office of the United States Olympic committee president, Mister Brundage, who holds that office, declared last summer that he had heard of no persecutions of Jews or Catholics in Germany, and thus saw no need for reconsidering the United States entry into the Olympic games. It seems that Mister Brundage is not very well read and his familiarity with current topics is woefully slight.

And now, Mister Brundage, anticipating probably a negative vote by the A. A. U., refuses to accept what is tantamount to a mandate for the United States to abstain from the games. Despite the fact that the A. A. U. is the most representative body in American athletics, Mister Brundage is saying beforehand that he does not consider any action it may take as an expression of popular will.

MISTER BRUNDAGE recently pointed out, too, that the A. A. U. constitutes only one of the 70-odd organizations that comprise the United States Olympic committee, but, politician-like, he neglected to say that the other 60-odd groups are joke outfits compared to the A. A. U., which is the duly-qualified organization unto which the certifying of the eligibility of the American athletes has been given for years.

Mister Brundage is, of course, one of the group that attempts to point out that Germany's domestic regulations governing Jews and Catholics is purely an internal affair which is no business of the A. A. U. or any other United States organization, but that is to speak nonsense. If Jews are restricted from the Nazi teams, and the evidence is preponderant that they are, then the Nazis have violated the cardinal essential of the Olympic code: namely, that there shall be no discrimination with regard to race or creed.

It is as if a debtor should say to his creditor: "You have no right to complain of my failure to keep my promise to repay you what I borrowed from you, for that is my private affair." Germany, to save its face, did promise to accept Jewish athletes on equal terms but the committee on fair play in sports has cited 36 concrete cases of rank discrimination.

As this department said once before, participation by the United States in the Olympic Games in Berlin would be a cowardly betrayal of all that this Nation stands for in the way of religious liberty and equality. And the only excuse for staging a 1936 Olympiad in Germany would be to equip Herr Hitler with two 56-pound weights and let him set a new broad-jump record into the Rhine. If nothing but bubbles reappeared on the surface then, I would say, the Olympiad would be a complete success.

Tulane to Get New Coach Next Year

By the United Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 5.—Dr. Wilbur C. Smith, director of athletics of Tulane University, said today Tulane would engage a new football coach for next season.

The announcement did not say who the new coach would be, but said the present coaches, Tex Cox, head coach, and Lester Lautenschlager, backfield coach, would be retained in some coaching capacity as well as on the faculty of the school of physical education.

O'Mahoney's 'Irish Whip' Decisive

2,500 See Donovan's Shoulders Pinned in 20½ Minutes.

By George Considine.

WITH a capacity crowd of 2,500 spectators in attendance, the wild Irish rose in Danno O'Mahoney, world wrestling champion, last night at Turner's tussle temple and Handsome Jack Donovan became Danno's 122d consecutive victim. An Irish whip, the only one of the match, persuaded Donovan to grunt the Gaelic equivalent of "Uncle!" after 20½ minutes of assorted holds, heaves and tosses.

The thing started nicely enough. The errant sons of Erin looked across the ring at each other and as they drew closer affected a knitted brow that would have done justice to any scientific gathering. Donovan drew first blood (figure of speech) by clapping on a headlock. But Danno groaned in his own peculiar brogue and broke the lock as though it were so much burned flax.

Champ Breaks Armlock.

Jack's next offering was an armlock, which the champion found no difficulty in mastering. For the first ten minutes O'Mahoney seemed to be content just to stick around and observe what his fellow countryman could produce. He allowed himself to get into apparently tough spots, but each time was more than equal to the occasion.

As Timekeeper Sam Ugle wheezed "ten minutes," Danno grabbed the challenger by his right wrist and swung him back and forth across the ring preparatory to slamming him to the mat to accomplish his famous Irish Whip. But Donovan wasn't quite ready to make his exit. He took hold of the rope, hid his face and said defiantly, "I won't do it" or words to that effect.

The capering Celts then gave an admirable imitation of a couple of six-day bike riders. With Donovan leading and Danno trailing by a lap and a half and Referee Benny Bortnick trying for show honors, it made a beautiful picture.

At the 15-minute mark O'Mahoney warmed to his task and applied a punishing combination split and shin bender. However, with Referee Bortnick's assistance, the thing was broken. Donovan attempted a series of flying tackles, but they were about as effective as a wet match against the fleet-footed champion.

Later, O'Mahoney swung into

U. S. Will Ship Team Even If A. A. U. Votes Ban, Says Brundage

Special Dispatch to The Post

NEW YORK, Dec. 5 (AP).—With both sides looking for victory, a close fight on the question of participation by the United States in the Olympic games at Berlin next year appeared imminent tonight as upward of 200 delegates arrived for the forty-seventh annual convention of the Amateur Athletic Union, starting tomorrow.

Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic Committee, flew in from Chicago today and said "the battle was won two years ago," but declared himself apprehensive that an open fight on the question on the convention floor Saturday "might very easily wreck the structure of the A. A. U." If the issue is discussed at the general assembly Brundage expressed confidence the A. A. U. would vote in favor of participation.

Mahoney Seeks Support.

Button-holing representatives of distant sections as they checked in, Jeremiah T. Mahoney, president of the A. A. U. and opposition leader, said "there is a preponderance of sentiment in favor of a boycott of the Olympic games." Like Brundage, he was also confident his side would prevail.

The question will be threshed out tomorrow at a joint star-chamber meeting between members of the A. A. U. executive and foreign relations committees. Brundage stated plainly that the issue has no place in the convention and indicated that unless the "other side" presents a strong case he will use his influence to stifle the question in the committee.

"The issue has no place in the convention," Brundage said, "and "might very easily wreck the structure of the A. A. U. I have two points of view on which I am not committing myself at this time. The first is to confine it to the committee meeting; the other is to thresh the question out on the floor. Regardless of what action the A. A. U. takes, we are going to send a team abroad."

Open Fight Foreseen.

The consensus, however, pointed to an open fight. Members of the joint committee were reported to be evenly divided on the matter. From a quarter strongly favoring American participation it was learned the opposition has been mustering considerable strength in the last two weeks and will present a formidable front when the dispute is brought up for discussion.

Coincidental with the arrival of delegates, a bulky envelope was received by Dan Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the A. A. U., from the German Olympic organizing committee. It contained voluminous evidence to be used to persuade boycott-advocates to change their opinions.

While the Olympic question was paramount in preconvention gossip there was a report in circulation that the national senior A. A. U. track and field championships would be held separate from the final Olympic try-outs, as was the case in 1924. Generally the events are combined.

Keeping Fans Off Field, Away From Goal Posts Big Problem

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—Colleges throughout the country have welcomed increased interest in football this year, especially as reflected in mounting box office receipts, but the problem of confining the spectators' enthusiasm to the stands has become an acute and critical issue.

The Associated Press learned today that athletic authorities of the so-called Eastern "Ivy League" are considering drastic measures to curb the increasing tendency toward riotous attacks on the goal posts or other encroachments by spectators on the playing fields. Echoes of this year's disturbances also have reached officers of the national football rules committee.

The growing feeling that "something should be done" about the situation before it gets completely out of control, was emphasized by the turbulent scenes in the Yale Bowl at the end of the Yale-Princeton game. Spectators razed the goal posts at one end of the gridiron before the game was over and were stopped from doing the same thing to the other set of uprights only after officials fought them off.

This was the second occurrence of the kind in the bowl during the season. The goal posts were ripped down in the last few minutes of the Yale-Dartmouth game.

A free-for-all was narrowly averted during the Fordham-New York University game at the Yankee Stadium, touched off by a fistfight between rival players. At New Orleans, Tulane and Louisiana State cohorts waged a general melee after the game and the goal posts were taken apart despite the precaution of the home forces in having them wired and charged with electricity.

It is with such episodes as these that college outhorities are mainly concerned, rather than such instances as that of the Dartmouth rooter who leaped out of the stands and took a place in the line-up facing Princeton at the goal line. They fear the possibility of dangerous consequences if some measures are not adopted for the purpose of keeping spectators under control.

Suggestions have gone so far as to include elimination of the goal posts and along with it, the point after touchdown, but it is not likely the rules committee will give this serious consideration.

Dykes Is Unaware Of Any Foxx Deal

Philadelphia, Dec. 5 (AP).—If First Baseman Jimmy Foxx has been sold to the Chicago White Sox by the Athletics, it's all news to Manager Jimmy Dykes of the Chisox.

"I haven't approached Connie Mack in reference to the deal," Dykes said today on returning from a hunting trip, "and, so far as I know, Mr. Comiskey, the Sox owner, and Harry Grabiner, the club secretary, have not completed any such deal.

"I talked with Jimmy by telephone, too, and he asked me if Chicago has bought him, and I told him the same story. So far as I know, there are no plans under way for his purchase."

All Inter-High Games May Be Played at Tech on Friday Night

Move Is Seen As Boon to Income

Increased Funds Would Help Other Sports, Bayh Explains.

By John R. Vosburgh.

PROSPECTS of Friday night games for the inter-high basketball series and of restoring the scene of play entirely to the Tech High gymnasium brightened yesterday with disclosure that the board of principals is likely to consider such a policy and that three influential figures in high school athletic circles are throwing their support behind it.

Birch E. Bayh, head of the physical education department; Lawrence E. Brown, chairman of the board of faculty advisers, and John Paul Collins, last year's chairman, expressed themselves in favor of abandoning last season's plan of holding half of the games at Roosevelt and half at Tech. Brown asserted the board of principals is being asked to reconsider its approval of the method used last season. Bayh disclosed he has written a letter to the principals in favor of abolishing the present policy.

Bayh, Brown and Collins asserted the belief that students, their families, school spirit, the inter-high treasury and the game itself would benefit by holding double-headers at Tech, as formerly. Brown and Collins also were in favor of Bayh's suggestion to hold Friday's games at Tech at night. Bayh said he had turned a copy of his letter over to Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou.

Drop in Attendance.

The physical education head explained that he is pointing out in his letter the drop in attendance at the games last season following the decision to experiment with some of the games being held at Roosevelt and the rest at Tech. He also is drawing attention of the principals to the subsequent effect on the inter-high treasury.

"If we are to expand our physical education program," Bayh explained, "if we are to branch out on our intramural program as we hope to do, we must have the inter-high treasury in comfortable circumstances. That necessitates a sensible method of holding the basketball series. I feel double-headers and Friday night games would work to the advantage of the students and also to our treasury. Certainly, the increased receipts would go back into worthy means."

Brown, who is president and also treasurer of the Interhigh Athletic Association, said that "basketball barely made ends meet last season." Collins, treasurer last season, said, "We finished about $8 ahead, too close for comfort." It was the worst season financially, Collins said, the series has experineced in his memory.

Maryland to Lose Harmony as Coach

Capt. John D. Harmony, University of Maryland boxing coach and assistant professor of military science and tactics, will be transferred at the close of the current school year to the General Command and Training School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., the War Department has announced.

Harmony has enjoyed a high degree of success with his Terrapin boxing squads. His most notable achievement was a tie with Virginia last winter, a victory over Army and second place in the Southern Conference tournament. He introduced the sport at the Old Line School.

Richmonders To Face D. C. Pin Teams

Dixie Pigs to Be Hosts to Cavaliers; Occidentals Will Travel.

THE Southern Intercity Duckpin League winds up its first series this week-end with the four leading teams clashing with second division clubs. The two local entries will oppose the two Richmond teams, Occidental Restaurant journeying to Richmond to roll the John Marshall Statesmen, and the Temple Dixie Pigs entertaining the Coca Cola Cavaliers.

With the Occidental team making an early runaway race of the league, interest has been turned to the battle of the stars for individual honors. Meyer Jacobson, Baltimore flash, is setting a terrific pace, with an average of 128-8. Astor Clark, local star, is following closely with 128; Joe Harrison, his teammate, has 126-9, and Joe Freschi, of the Pigs, is third with 125-11. Dutch Newman's 171 game and Freschi's 725 set are tops in that department, while Ollie Pacini's 103 spares and 29 strikes each by George Honey and Freschi are high.

Phil Berman toppled the maples for a 185 game and a 424 set last night in the Takoma Suburban League at Takoma, to roll the highest game in the four-year history of the league. His team, Fritz Billiards, went into a first-place tie with Stewart Brothers No. 1 by taking two games from Victor Flower Shop. Stewart Brothers No. 1 team chalked up a season record total pinfall with 1,756.

The Recreation alleys will hold a three-game preliminary doubles event tomorrow night at 8 o'clock for a free entrance fee in the Atlantic Coast doubles. The fee for the preliminary will be $1.45 a man, which includes cost of games.

Wisconsin Captain Seeks New Coach

Milwaukee, Dec. 5 (AP).—The Milwaukee Sentinel said tonight that Capt. Elect John Golemgeske, of the University of Wisconsin football team, had made a futile attempt to have Dr. C. W. Spears removed as head grid coach.

Golemgeske circulated a petition among members of the squad, the Sentinel said, asking that Spears be replaced, and was ready to give the petition to Athletic Director Dr. Walter Meanwell when fraternity brothers persuaded Golemgeske to destroy it.

Golemgeske is a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon.

Okla. Aggies' Cries Will Oust Exendine

By the Associated Press.

Stillwater, Okla., Dec. 5.—Oklahoma's football "Wolves," routed at the State university by Capt. Lawrence "Biff" Jones, have set out in full cry after Albert A. Exendine, the "old warrior" now coaching at Oklahoma A. and M. College.

The yapping has become so loud that a member of the college athletic committee said tonight the days of the one-time Carlisle teammate of the famous Jim Thorpe are numbered.

No successor to Exendine, who followed Lynn Waldorf, now at Northwestern University, has been selected. The board member said, "We are looking for the best man we can attract."

Northeast Boys Take Four Out of Six Bouts

Host boxers won four of six bouts as the fistic season opened at the Northeast Boys Club last night. Harry Donn, star of Coach Billy Reed's team, scored a technical knockout over James Willis, Georgetown Boys Club, in the 135-pound bout. Willis went out in the first round.

135-pound—Clyde Hays decisioned Jim Lewis.
145-pound—Steve Mamakos won from Cliff Bond by forfeit.
165-pound—Gene Bond won from Mike Koffman on a fall in 3:19.

Louis' Trainer Held.

Chicago, Dec. 5 (AP).—Jack Blackburn, 52, Joe Louis' trainer, was held to the grand jury in $3,000 bonds on a charge of manslaughter. The same charge was lodged against William Parnell, 50, and a murder charge was placed against John Bowman, in connection with the fatal shooting six weeks ago of Enoch Hauser, 69. All are Negroes.

Plans Are Laid By North Va. Cage Loop

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALDIE, Va., Dec. 5.—Plans are in the making for the forthcoming season of the Northern Virginia Basketball League, it was announced here today. Although play will not open until the first week in January, six teams already have obtained franchises. They are: Aldie, Oakton, Berryville, McLean, Upperville and the Young Democratic Club of Falls Church.

Officials of the league have invited the Manassas A. C. as well as teams from Warrenton and Marshall to compete. Any club wishing to enter the competition must pay a franchise fee of $5 to defray league expenses (trophies, stationery, etc.). League games will begin at 8 p. m. and a fine of $2 will be assessed teams forfeiting games unless notice is given the interested team by 6 p. m. on the night of the scheduled game.

Oakton home play nights will be Tuesday and Wednesday, except the first Wednesday of each month; Aldie on Monday and Wednesday; Falls Church on all nights except Friday and Sunday; McLean on Thursday; Upperville on Saturday and Tuesday, except the first Monday of the month; Berryville home play nights have not yet been decided.

R. C. L. Moncure, of Aldie, has been re-elected president of the league, with Charles A. Clerk, of McLean, secretary.

Wilson, Ex-Pitt Star, With Heurich Sunday

Whitty Wilson, former Pittsburgh University ace, has clinched a berth on the Heurich Pros basketball team, and will start at guard in the Brewers' opening game Sunday afternoon against the Bridgeton (N. J.) Bears, leaders in the Eastern Pro League.

Wilson will play guard with Ralph Bennie. Joe Croson, former All-Southern center while at Duke, will be at center, and Moon Evans and Bucky Buscher, former Maryland University stars, will open at forward.

In the preliminary game, at 1:30, Olmsted Grill will meet Coffey Sales Co.

Roosevelt High Faces Montgomery Quintet

Roosevelt High continues to set the pace in the newly born basketball season today when it meets Montgomery-Blair High, formerly known as Takoma-Silver Spring, at the Roosevelt gym. Already one game up on the other schools, Roosevelt will be stepping out in its second contest while the other inter-high members are still preparing for their initial conflicts. Action starts at 3:30 p. m.

various experimental grips with little or no resistance and then, evidently remembering that he had to catch a train to the next town, Irish Whipped Donovan to the mat with considerable gusto. Donovan got the cheers. O'Mahoney got the decision. And everybody was happy.

The Dean Detton-Joe Cox semi-final, which followed the main event, developed into by far the liveliest entertainment of the party. After a perfectly swell display of fireworks that had the crowd in a continual uproar, the bout was declared a draw.

Charlie Strack toiled to a 26-minute decision over Floyd Marshall, winning on a series of shoulder-pooshes-in-the-mush, while in the opener virtue was far from triumphant as Chief (Nasty Mans) Chewaki fouled his way to a roundly booed verdict over Don Nolan in 16 minutes. The winning grip? You guess.

Five Are Jailed In N. Y. Tip Inquiry

By the Associated Press.

BALLSTON SPA, N. Y., Dec. 5.—New York State's investigation into fake race track tip services found five persons in jail tonight facing charges of conspiracy and fraud.

The five are Theodore Epstein, 40; his wife, Anna; Irving Bush, all of New York; Joseph Rifici, 40, and Samuel Rosenthal, 45, both of Brooklyn, officers of the Tab Printing Co., the Daily Racing Tab and the New York Daily Racing Post.

Epstein, his wife and Bush face charges of false advertising and conspiracy. Rifici and Rosenthal face charges of conspiracy to commit petit larceny and conspiracy to defraud.

Lee-Jackson's Teams Face Fairfax

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Dec. 5.—The basketball season will open Friday night, when Lee-Jackson High School's boys' and girls' basketball teams open their home season in the suburban high school gymnasium, opposing the Fairfax High School teams.

Coach Revely of the boys' team has been handicapped by a lack of material, but the team has been practicing daily for the last month and shows promise of developing into a formidable aggregation. Norris, guard, and Koci, forward, are the only returning lettermen. They are augmented by a number of holdovers from last year's reserves, notably Clarence Flick, center, who is acting captain; Fletcher, Dodd and Moltz, guards; Lynch, Leake and Fraly, forwards.

At a meeting held at the George Washington High School last night, the Alumni Association decided to present sweaters and letters to the varsity football squad which just finished the most successful season ever enjoyed by the local school. These sweaters will be presented at the annual football banquet, December 13, in the school cafeteria.

Galbreath, Illinois Star, to Enter Army

Champaign, Ill., Dec. 5 (AP).—Charles Galbreath, captain of the 1935 University of Illinois football team, has accepted an appointment to the United States Military Academy and will report at West Point next July to begin a four-year course.

Galbreath, whose home is at Tuscola, Ill., will be graduated from Illinois in June.

Krug Is Named As Gallaudet Grid Coach

To Succeed Teddy Hughes; Mitchell or Flynn May Be His Aid.

WALTER KRUG, basketball and assistant football coach at Gallaudet College for several years, yesterday was appointed head football coach, succeeding Teddy Hughes, who resigned that post Wednesday. Hughes will continue to act as director of athletics.

A three-letter winner in his undergraduate days and former pupil of Hughes, Krug has been at the Kendall Green institution since his graduation several years ago. He is a keen student of both football and basketball, and was recommended for the position by the retiring coach. He held down first base on the baseball team.

Hughes' resignation was no surprise to those familiar with the situation at Gallaudet. He had indicated his desire to resign as early as two years ago, but, with no successor immediately available, remained with the squad. A poor season, one of the most disastrous of his coaching career, and subsequent dissatisfaction among the students, prompted the move.

It was rumored that Orrell Mitchell, Gonzaga High School coach, or "Bingo" Flynn, former Catholic University star, would be offered the position. Announcement of Krug's appointment led to additional rumors that one of the two would be asked to assist the new coach.

Rival Maryland Elevens Are Aroused

WITH both teams in a belligerent mood and fairly snorting defiance, Maryland and Western Maryland are ready for their game tomorrow at Baltimore that will bring the 1935 Eastern football campaign to a finish. A hard week of practice will be culminated today with light workouts.

Reports from the two camps indicated that the teams are in excellent physical condition and will have their full strength available for the fray.

Maryland will rely chiefly on its all-conference halfback, Bill Guckeyson, and his supporting cast to capture its fourteenth victory over the Terrors in their long series. For 11 members of the Terp squad it will mark their final appearance in the black and gold.

Those scheduled to graduate in June are Bernie Buscher, Lou Ennis, Carl Stalfort, Charles Callahan, Ed Minion, Harry Gretz, George Sachs, Buddy Yaeger, Bill Garrott, Bernie Cummings and Tom McLaughlin.

week, before they will be able to accept.

The Cardinal gridmen are in excellent physical condition, Bergman said yesterday, and will resume practice within the next few days. Those with the basket-ball team will continue there until the squad leaves for Miami. It is planned to spend a week preceding the game in Florida.

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 5 (U.P.)—Vanderbilt University officials tonight apparently were divided on the question of whether to accept an invitation to play a post-season game with Catholic University in the Orange Bowl at Miami.

Athletic Director Dan McGugin was in Louisville, Ky., tonight and the school's athletic committee probably will not meet until early next week to make a definite decision on the invitation.

Holy Cross Girls Win Court League Crown

Holy Cross Academy's girls' basketball team defeated the St. Cecelia's team yesterday, 44 to 28, to clinch the C. S. C. League Cup.

Margaret Viehmann, Betty Klein, Ruth McGuire, Shirley Morris and Rose Ruppert were outstanding in Holy Cross' victory.

W. & L. Booked By Army for '36

West Point, N. Y., Dec. 5 (AP).—Army's nine-game football schedule for 1936, announced today, will find the Cadets renewing relationships with four old rivals, and meeting two newcomers in addition to their traditional games with Harvard, Notre Dame and Navy.

The schedule:

October 3, Washington and Lee; 10, Columbia, at New York; 17, Harvard, at Cambrige; 24, Springfield College; 31, Colgate; November 7, Muhlenberg; 14, Notre Dame, at New York; 21, Hobart; 28, Navy, at Philadelphia.

New Intercity Golf Interest Is Sought

By Dave Herman.

SHORTLY after being inaugurated as president of the Women's District of Columbia Golf Association at its annual election and meeting yesterday at Kenwood, Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, of Congressional, said that she would attempt to stir up more interest in the intercity team matches.

It was pointed out that the District women had a strong representation in the matches here, but when the time came to muster a team for an invasion of Richmond or Baltimore in a return battle many of the Washington stars would be absent from the lineup.

In order to assure the success of the home-and-home matches and the annual first and second interclub iDstrict team competition, it was suggested by the retiring acting president, Miss Susan Hacker, of Chevy Chase, that the two vice presidents of the association cooperate with the team captains.

Richmond, which broke even with Washington in matches this season, already has offered dates—June 9-10 in Washington and September 29-30 in Richmond.

Others elected with Mrs. Payne were Mrs. J. Franklin Gross, of Indian Spring, who was unable to attend due to illness, first vice president; Mrs. Roy C. Miller, of Kenwood, second vice president; Mrs. David McPherson, of Manor, secretary, and Mrs. Theodore Peyser, of Woodmont, treasurer.

Mrs. Payne stated that her committees would not be named until next month, after which the schedule for the season will be drawn up.

The Washington Post match play handicap championship, won last year by Miss Louise Claytor, probably will be played at Chevy Chase, home club of the winner.

Women's Hockey Team Meets Baltimoreans

The big game of the season for the city's All-Washington women's field hockey team takes place tomorrow when it meets the invasion of a powerful All-Baltimore combination. The game is due to start at 2:30 p. m. at the National Cathedral Field, Thirty-fourth street and Woodley road northwest.

Heading the Maryland team will be Anne Pugh, captain and for two years an All-American choice. Although the local team will enter the game on the short end of the odds, hopes of springing an upset were raised this week with the return to the team of Jenny Turnbull, star forward, who had been confined to the sidelines with a knee injury for several weeks.

Wants Court Game.

The 130-pound Stansbury Cafe team would like to hear from any basketball team in the city for a game to be played at Central High School next Wednesday. Call William Glasscock at Georgia 6894.

Council Wins Golf Prize.

Charlie Council, Washington Post linotype operator, won the blind bogey prize in the Knights of the Round Table golf tournament yesterday over the wind-swept Belle Haven Country Club course. He carded 95—22—73.

Boys Club in Bouts.

The Washington Boys Club opened its intra-club wrestling season yesterday with the boys staging eight hard-fought matches, five of which were decided by falls.

65-pound class—Charlie Thompson (N. E.) decisioned Ray Brown (W. B. C.); Boots Gannon (Merritt) decisioned Dick Chaney (N.E.).
105-pound class—Buster Miller (W. B. C.) decisioned Orville Lyon (N.E.).
130-pound class—Fred Reed (N.E.) decisioned Charlie Watson (W. B. C.).
135-pound class—Harry Donn (N.E.) Won a technical K.O. over James Willis (G. B. C.) first round.

Sport Center Soccer Tilts Scheduled

Park View and Rosedale to Clash Tomorrow for First Time.

THE SPORT CENTER SOCCER LEAGUE—newest of the numerous such organizations fostered by the Municipal Playground Department—again has an attractive list of games for the week-end.

At 11 a. m. tomorrow, on Burroughs Playground, Twentieth and Monroe streets northeast, Park View and Rosedale—first and second, respectively, in the league standings—will meet for the first time this season. Rosedale was picked by many fans at the beginning of the year as an easy winner of the league title but has apparently been relegated to the runner-up position by the Park View boys, who have succeeded in putting together a smooth-working and clever roster.

Other games tomorrow will find Sherwood "B" opposing Georgetown at Sherwood Playground; Virginia Avenue playing Burroughs at Rosedale Playground, and Sherwood "A" meeting McMillan on the latter's ground, all games starting at 11 a. m.

Recreation League games Sunday will be Mitchell Brothers vs. Sabaudia, on Benning Field at 1 p. m.—as a preliminary to the Heurich Brewers and Fernwood (Baltimore) Southeastern League game at 2:30—Sun Radio and Littoria on Rosedale Playground at 2:30, and Occoquan at Silver Spring, also at 2:30.

THE SCOTCH THAT CIRCLES THE GLOBE
BAGDAD and BOSTON are of one mind
Lovers and judges of Scotch Whisky have made McCallum's Perfection the standard choice, without consideration of latitude or longitude. There are several reasons for this. One is the uniformity of McCallum's. Another is sentiment; McCallum's is still made by the same Edinburgh family that founded the business in 1807. Every drop is eight years old. It is imported in oval bottles, taped and sealed, with handy measuring tops.

Viva Pete Is Winner at Charles Town

3,500 Watch ¾-Length Triumph

Lativich Runs Second; Palumbo Has Triple; $198.40 Double.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

CHARLES TOWN RACE TRACK, W. Va., Dec. 5.—Autumn returned to Jefferson County this afternoon and the largest crowd of the meeting, some 3,500, witnessed an interesting program featured by the Hilltop Purse, a 1 1-16-mile race for 3-year-olds and upward. The winner was Viva Pete, a son of Petee Wrack, and it was his second triumph of the week. Jimmy Sullivan, Washington jockey, overcame a lot of trouble to get the $11 shot home in front of the field of seven.

Viva Pete had a margin of three parts of a length on Lativich and three lengths on Little Argo as the leaders reached the pay-off point. Among the beaten was Tiempo, the favorite.

Jockey Palumbo continued to set the pace for the local riding colony by bringing home three winners for the second straight day.

A warm sun shone between the mountains and must have had a stimulating effect on the betting, which proved the best of the four days of this session. The daily double players put $2,206 through the windows and a select few, who invested in Surry and Spero, went back to collect a $198.40 mutuel.

In the feature Viva Pete was shuffled back at the start, while Little Argo and Alice Byrd were battling for the lead. However, Jackey Sullivan steadied his mount along, making the most of a poor position. Little Argo began to falter swinging for the stretch and Lativich forged to the front. Sullivan finally got his mount in the clear by going to the outside and then he went to the drive. Viva Pete then wore down Lativich and was going away at the end.

Sammy Palumbo, the king of riders hereabouts, rode Topsie H. to victory in the day's opening sprint at a $46.40 mutuel.

Dear Al: Charles Town Race Track, W. Va., Dec. 5.

Since the first day of the meeting there has been a rather heavy woman sitting in the grandstand here. When the cold winds have forced others to go down to the warm fires in the betting ring, this woman has sat nonchalantly looking over her program. Not a few have remarked about "that hardy soul" and "she certainly can't mind the cold." Even the boys in the press box wondered how she did it. I found out something today. The woman, who has a blanket wrapped around her has an oil lantern between her feet, and that, my friends, establishes her as "Charles Town race fan No. 1." Clocker Mike pulled a fair one today. He has been doing well for himself. Today, Mike had an important look so several of the hangers-around leaned closer when Mike called a messenger boy. He pulled out his roll. Those nearby were eager to get Mike's good thing. "Boy," said Mike, handing him a ten spot, "get me a bar of chocolate." BILL.

First race—Povel has worked excellently and seems destined to graduate from the maiden class in this race. Sullivan will do the riding. Justa Flight can better that opening day effort and will be dangerous. Luke Phantom was poorly ridden last out and is due respect.

Second race—Tolimata may need a soft track and a longer route but I'm going to string along. This one showed me several nice moves in Maryland. Radiator and Currants to take care of the others. Clocker Mike likes Peggy Can and perhaps she can.

Third race—By Surprise was a paddock tip last out. Went well for 4 furlongs and then dropped out of it. Meets cheaper company here and is dangerous. Idle Worker and Pordina are both fit but are far down the list. Dolente has worked well and may run for Palumbo. Black Ribbon is Mike's special.

Fourth race—Nora's Grace should like the lightning fast course and if Palumbo rides I expect no mistakes. Cantersine is due consideration in this sort of company. Debbie comes to the race recommended by good trials and has a fighting chance.

Fifth race—Pencader and Porphyry should battle it out here. The first named is an honest plater and in fine shape. Porphyry made a good move last out.

Sixth race—Tuleyries Wand is far down the list but would be the one to beat if sent into action. Apathy's last was a poor effort and may be bothered by the hard track but has a class edge on these. Ogle to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Plain Ace, On Trial and St. Christopher is the way I prefer them in the day's finale.

Chart of Charles Town Races

IN HIGH	117	1	6	5½	5½	7²	8	Davis	43.70

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOPSIE H., $46.40, $18.60, $4.80; NAY NAY, $5.60, $2.80; AGA RAY, $2.20.

TOPSIE H. having good speed, assumed command midway of the back stretch after repeated efforts from NAY NAY and came out slowly under strong urging. NAY NAY, hard ridden from the start, held on with good courage. AGA RAY, forced to race on the outside after suffering interference at the turn into the back stretch, closed resolutely when in full stride. ALICE B. tired prominently, saved ground, but failed to rally under a hard drive.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:08. Off at 2:09½. Winner, Brandon Stable's b. g. by Single Foot—Martha J. Trained by T. M. Waller. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third $20; fourth, $10. Time, 0:24, 0:49 1-5, 1:15 3-5, 1:22 1-5.

OTWAY	112	5	8	7¹	7¹	8	8	Follin	245.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SURRY, $20.40, $6.00, $4.00; CHILLY EBBIE, $3.60, $3.20; PAUL JUNIOR, $3.60.

SURRY got going strongly from the beginning and following CHILLY EBBIE closely, took command when reaching the home stretch, was kept under mild pressure and drew out steadily at the end. CHILLY EBBIE, rushed hard to gain command at the first turn, but could not stay with the winner when challenged. PAUL JUNIOR raced into contention at the head of the leaders, but tired when put to a hard drive.

THIRD RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:36. Off at 2:37½. Winner, Stoney View Stable's b. m. (5), by Great Jaz—Miss E. M. Trained by L. E. Ruff. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 3-5, 1:14 2-5, 1:28 1-5.

SINGLEAM	104	7	6	3½	7¹	8	8	Everett	191.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPERO, $18.40, $4.00; WHISKORA, $10.00, $3.80; SUNDROPS, $2.80.

SPERO, securing racing room between her opponents when straightened into the back stretch, went into contention readily, swung to the outside to wear WHISKORA down then came out smartly through the closing stages. WHISKORA sprinted into a clear lead after reaching the back stretch, saved much ground, but could not resist the winner's effort. SUNDROPS, slower than usual to settle into her stride, circled her field and closed with good courage.

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $300. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start poor. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:05. Off at 3:08. Winner, R. M. Luther's ch. f. (3), by Light Brigade—Beauteous. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third $20; fourth, $10. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:14, 1:18 3-5.

COUNSELLOR BILLY	116	3	Left at post					Everett	29.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TITIAN KIDDIE, $7.40, $4.00, $3.40; STEPEE, $4.00, $3.00; ELISE, $17.00.

TITIAN KIDDIE sprinted into a commanding lead after reaching the back stretch, continued strongly and drew out at will during the final stages. STEPEE away well but lacking early speed, bettered her position on the outside, closed gamely, but could not reach the winner. ELISE was strongly ridden throughout and was easily best of the others. GEE SHARP could not offer contention at any part of the trip.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:40. Off at 3:36½. Winner, D. T. Dorner's ch. g. (3), by Pete Wrack—Marshmallow. Trained by R. A. Johnson. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth $10. Time, 0:25, 0:51 1-5, 1:16, 1:42 2-5, 1:48.

ALICE BYRD	112	1	2	2nk	4½	6¹⁰	7	Watters	22.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VIVA PETE, $11.00, $4.80 $4.20; LATTIVICH, $5.80, $3.80; LITTLE ARGO, $7.40.

VIVA PETE, rated close to the leaders, raced up on horses' heels when reaching the back stretch, worked his way through a narrow opening approaching the home stretch to engage the leaders, came to the outside for the final drive and was up in front in the last sixteenth. LATTIVICH, in tight quarters in the first 6 furlongs, wore a clear lead after reaching the back stretch, but could not withstand the winner. LITTLE ARGO shook off contention from TIEMPO saved ground, but weakened from the early effort. LOTTA AIRS was strongly handled all the way and tired well. DEARZIN closed full of run after trailing far back.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward; fillies and mares. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:08½. Winner, W. G. Townsend's br. f. (3), by Petee Wrack—Rosequartz. Trained by E. B. Townsend. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:50 2-5, 1:16, 1:42 3-5, 1:49 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED LABEL, $9.00, $5.20, $4.40; ONLY FOOLIN', $17.40, $11.80; MISS CYLLENE $4.00.

RED LABEL moved into the lead after the opening furlong, went along under slight reserve until nearing the last turn, responded willingly when shaken up and held ONLY FOOLIN' safe under pressure. ONLY FOOLIN' followed close to the leaders on the outside, moved up gamely when put to severe urging and continued gamely to the end. MISS CYLLENE went prominently from the beginning, but tired in the last quarter mile after making strong efforts early. MONEDY finished racing gamely, DOUBTLESS rallied stronsly at the end of 6 furlongs, but tired thereafter. MISS BELIZE was held safe.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:35. Off at 4:35½. Winner, A. H. Utterback's ch. g. (6), by The Porter—Pancake. Trained by owner. Value to winner $220; second $60; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:50, 1:15, 1:40 2-5, 1:55.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HOT CAKE, $3.80, $2.60 2.20; BRIGHT SPIRITS, $3.80, $2.80; DARK AYR $3.00.

HOT CAKE went into an easy lead after being rushed away from the starting gate, went along smoothly while setting the pace and came out when mildly shaken up. BRIGHT SPIRITS raced closest to the winner from the beginning, but could not offer serious contention at any stage. DARK AYR slow to settle into his stride, worked his way up steadily in the last half mile and outfinished

Amelia Earhart Talks Here Tonight on Flying

Amelia Earhart Putnam will tell members of the National Geographic Society about her non-stop flight from Mexico City to New York, in an illustrated lecture at Constitution Hall tonight. After an early breakfast in the Mexican capital, Mrs. Putnam flew the 2,125 miles to New York in time for a late dinner there the same day.

The non-stop flight was in the same plane used by Mrs. Putnam on her Hawaii-California hop and with the same engine that took her across the Atlantic three years ago.

Roper Will Be Speaker For Clemson's Alumni

Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper will be the guest speaker at a dinner meeting of the Washington Chapter of the Clemson Alumni Association at the University Club Tuesday.

Alumni in Washington, Baltimore and Richmond will attend. Charles E. Jackson, deputy commissioner of the Bureau of Fisheries, also will speak. J. A. McCrary is president of the club.

Traffic Rules, Drinking Bring Most of Arrests

Violation of traffic regulations, drunkenness and speeding were the most numerous offenses on the park police blotter in November, according to the monthly report submitted yesterday by Capt. Patrick J. Carroll. The number of arrests, respectively, was 86, 59 and 64.

The total number of arrests was 245, 33 of which were made on the Mount Vernon Memorial highway. Fines and forfeitures totaled $1,688.

Arkansas Society Dance.

Arkansans in Washington interested in attending the State society's first reception and dance of the winter tonight at the Willard Hotel may buy tickets at the ballroom entrance or in advance from J. O. Rhyne, president. He may be reached today at District 5050, branch 560, or at North 5792 during the evening.

Lecture on Patents.

Richard Spencer, first assistant commissioner of patents, will speak on "Patents and Inventions Generally" next Thursday at 8 p. m., before the American Society of Mechanical Engineers in Potomac Electric Power Co. auditorium, Tenth and E streets northwest.

Wanderbirds Will Hike in Virginia Hills

Difficult Trail Is Chosen for Scaling of Old Rag Mountain.

By Robert Shosteck.

Few Wanderbird hikers can afford to miss Sunday's trip to the Blue Ridge Mountains where a real treat—Old Rag Mountain—is in store. This peak, 3,291 feet high, is the most spectacular lone mountain in the Northern Virginia Blue Ridge, and is reached by a steep and rocky 3-mile trail. From the barren ridge of Old Rag one may obtain outstanding panoramic views of the surrounding valleys and mountains. An added attraction, for those who have the stamina to do 10 miles, will be a visit to Corbin Hollow, the home of a number of isolated mountaineer families. Old Rag post-office, a quaint log building, also is of some interest.

Readers and hikers planning to go on the 7-mile hike to Old Rag Mountain and return must buy tickets at $2.50 each, at The Washington Post counter, before 7 p. m. Saturday. Only enough will be taken to fill three buses, so buy early if you want to be sure of a seat. Bring lunch and a cup for coffee. Supper will be had at the Cherry Tree and Hatchet, Washington, Va., at 50 cents a plate. Those with any disabilities affecting heart or legs are cautioned not to go on this trip, since the 3 miles up to Old Rag are quite trying, even to the experienced hiker. Everyone is advised to wear warm clothing and hiking shoes.

Starting from Nethers, we follow an old road (now impassable for autos) past Jenkins' store, to the Ridge Trail which follows a branch of Brokenback Run. The trail, now blue-blazed, is free of obstructions, and there are three springs along its circuitous course to Old Rag.

The bare, precipitous cliffs of Old Rag remind one of Stony Man Mountain, which the Wanderbirds climbed on the trip to Skyland. The return trip via the Saddle Trail is somewhat easier than the ascent. Old Rag post-office is but one-half mile up the road and Nethers, where our buses await us, is about 3 miles to the right.

Veteran hikers can take a side trip up Corbin Hollow, the home of poverty-stricken mountaineers who live in bare hovels and speak an Elizabethan English. Such a detour would add about 3 miles to the hike.

The buses will leave The Post Building at 7 a. m. Sunday, and return to Washington by 10 p. m.

The countryside around Accotink Creek, Virginia will be the goal of the Red Triangle hikers on Sunday. The group will meet at Fifteenth street and Constitution avenue at 2 p. m. H. B. George is leader. The round trip fare is 25 cents.

The Potomac Appalachian Trails Club plans a joint outing with the Mountain Club of Maryland along the Dillsburg—White Rocks Ridge Trail in Pennsylvania. Buses leave Treasury place at 7 a. m. Sunday. The total cost is $3.25 and reservations must be made with H. L. Solyom, phone Wisconsin 3396-J.

The Vita Health Hikers will meet at the Treasury (north entrance) at 9:30 Sunday, for a trip to Dalecarlia Reservoir. The group will take the Cabin John car to the District line, and then skirt around the reservoir, hiking cross-country to Wisconsin and Cathedral avenues.

4 Pistols Burglar's Loot.

Four pistols valued at $132 and $23 in cash were stolen from his office in the Woodward Building, Harold Kirtz, of the Wardman Park Hotel, sales manager for the Smith & Wesson Co., reported to police. The burglars entered the office with a duplicate key and smashed open a steel locker to obtain the guns. Sixteen other valuable guns were overlooked, Kirtz said.

Flood Survey Started On Marshy Hope Creek

Federalsburg, Md., Dec. 5 (AP).—A survey of Marshy Hope Creek here to determine what steps should be taken to prevent a recurrence of the flood of last September has been started and is expected to be completed within two weeks.

The work is in charge of C. C. Neher, Baltimore, assistant engineer in the office of Col. Edward Dent, district engineer of the War Department.

Helen Hayes Show To Aid Smith Fund

Premiere Will Be Benefit for D. C. Scholarship.

To raise funds for a scholarship at Smith for a Washington girl, the Smith College Club of Washington is sponsoring the opening performance of "Victoria Regina," starring Helen Hayes, which opens here on the evening of December 16, after a successful run in London.

Mrs. John Guider, president of the Smith Club, is chairman of arrangements for the benefit. She will be assisted by Mrs. Clayton Haskell.

Members of the various committees for the performance are Mrs. S. W. Stinemetz, Miss Ruth McClellan, Mrs. R. M. Kauffmann, Mrs. R. C. Owers, Mrs. Evan Wilson, Miss Lois Jameson, Mrs. Farrand Flowers, Mrs. Howard Vermilyes, Miss Dudley Harmon, Miss Helen Atwater, Mrs. Karl Fenning, Mrs. G. D. McKinney, Mrs. J. Leake, Mrs. W. L. Corbin, Mrs. H. G. Nichols and Mrs. William Chapin Huntington, former president of the Smith College Alumnae Association.

Burns Fatal to Boy.

Baltimore, Dec. 5 (AP).—A 16-year-old boy, James Edmonson, died here today, victim of burns he received when he thrust his gasoline-drenched hands over a fire to warm them. The flames leaped to his hands, set his clothing afire.
